'BARONESS VON ORENDORF'

Mysterious patroness of Glacia Calla, said to have been either the aunt or the mother of the woman who accuses her husband of murdering her brother. The Baroness had a meteoric career in Washington, maintaining an establishment which was very popular among the smart diplomatic set.

This is an authentic photograph of "the Baroness," taken at the time of her Washington regime, when Glacia Calla, as her protege, made such a social sensation.

SHAH CHASED BY BOMBS

Two Hurled From Roofs at Motor Carriage of Persian Ruler as He Drove Through Teheran Streets—Pilot Carriage Blown to Fragments, Three Killed, Score Injured.

TEHERAN, Persia, Feb. 28.—Two bombs were thrown at the Shah of Persia as he drove through the streets to-day. The ruler escaped unhurt, but three of his outriders were killed and twenty-one persons were injured. The would-be assassins escaped.

But for the fact that the Shah, against whom many threats have recently been made, had taken the precaution to send a closed motor car ahead of his own carriage, there is little doubt that he would have been killed. The conspirators were awaiting him on the roof of a house on the street adjoining the one it was expected he would pass.

So narrow is the street in which the outrage was committed that it was necessary to do little more than drop the explosives from above, with practical certainty that they would not miss the target.

Assassins Escape.

It is plain that the plotters supposed the Shah was in the motor, and the two bombs were thrown in rapid succession as it passed their hiding place.

The first exploded in the air, but the second fell almost underneath the car and burst with terrific violence. The motor was blown to bits and the guards and spectators who lined the streets were hurled in heaps.

The door of the house was instantly broken open by the police, but while the building was being ransacked the would-be murderers had reached another roof and fled.

The driver of the Shah's carriage had quickly pulled up at the first report and the vehicle, surrounded by guards, was driven at top speed to the palace.

The ruler has been at swords' points with a large element of his subjects for some time as a result of his efforts to set aside the constitution granted by his predecessor.

On February 15 a report that the Shah was killed by assassins suddenly startled the world and both Russia and Turkey were reported as being ready to invade Persia in order to seize the reins of government. The rumor proved unfounded, but that the plotters, who were probably foiled at that time, were determined to put their plan into execution at the first opportunity is shown by bomb throwing to-day.

NATION RENT BY FACTIONS.

This is not the first attempt upon the life of the young ruler, who ascended the throne amidst popular discontent and grave unrest, and whose sincere desire to put into life the numerous reforms demanded by the Constitutionalists of Persia met with insurmountable difficulties in the fact that the country was rent by several parties, all with various platforms, and all ready to assume an armed hostility to the government should their demands be disregarded.

Things came to a climax when about two months ago the Shah banished his ministers and attempted to overrule the bidding of the Persian Parliament. He was accused of following the dictates of the fanatical party and an appeal was made to the foreign powers to force the Shah to live up to the constitutional agreement with his people.

The difficulty was finally adjusted through the efforts of the British minister at Teheran, but the spark of hatred against the "usurper," as the Shah has since become known among his subjects, has continued to glow, and conspiracies to do away with the "would-be tyrant" have been so numerous that the Persian police found themselves unable to cope with the situation.

In diplomatic circles the situation in Persia is considered as very serious, and a revolution is considered as not being in the far distant future.

"I SLEW HIM IN DUEL, MAN-FASHION."—ROY

HUSBAND OF GLACIA CALLA, IN PARIS, TELLS HOW HE KILLED CARKIN.

By the Hearst News Service.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—In an interview with Paul E. Roy, who is charged by his wife, known on the stage as Glacia Calla, with the murder of her brother, "Sonny" Carkin, at Newington, N. H., on January 2, Roy said that he had been advised by his lawyer, Maitre Aubin, not to discuss the case further. Roy added:

"The story of the shooting of Carkin as given to the Hearst News Service on Wednesday evening is true in every detail. The allegation of my wife that I shot her brother in the back is absolutely false. I shot 'Sonny' in a fair, stand-up, man-to-man duel. It was his life or mine.

BRANDS STORY AS FALSE.

"The story that George Carkin is not my wife's brother is also false. The origin of the story is due to the peculiar actions of Glacia and George while occupying a flat in the Rue Hamelin. Visitors often doubted that relationship, owing to Glacia's free and easy manner."

The Minister of Foreign Affairs said to-day that he had no official knowledge of the charge against Roy.

When the expected arrest of Roy is made there is no doubt that he will be fully prepared with his defence.

That he expected such a charge to be made against him seems proven by the fact that he engaged both Maitre Aubin and M. Goron, respectively his attorney and detective, almost immediately on his return from the United States, and both have been working on the case for several weeks. Roy himself refuses to give out further interviews, but Aubin and Goron speak with considerable freedom for him.

The detective's opinion is that, despite her accusation against Roy, his wife's testimony of itself will clear the young Frenchman of murder.

He points out that in Mrs. Roy's affidavit, made in Portsmouth, N. H., yesterday, it is positively stated that the woman saw Carkin draw a revolver as she left the room where the two men were quarrelling, that he rested the barrel of the weapon on the arm of a chair and that a moment after she had passed outside the doorway she heard two shots, following which Carkin staggered out, crying that he had been shot.

WILL NOT CONTEST DIVORCE

As the detective sees it, this evidence conclusively proves his client to have been attacked and to have fired in self defence. He thinks the case will never get beyond a French examining magistrate.

"Roy told me," said Detective Goron, "that the first ball struck Carkin in the head, the second and the third in the side and that the two last missed him and lodged in the wall. When the coroner made an examination Glacia Calla and her mother, Mrs. Kelley, explained that the two bullets in the wall had been fired by Carkin at a dog before his suicide."

The defence's explanation of Carkin being shot in the back was that the American was making for a doorway, firing as he went, and Roy's shots struck him as he turned to leave.

Maitre Aubin has copies of American records showing Carkin was born August 25, 1875, the son of George O. and Grace E. Carkin. He has been able to find no record of Lilian Carkin's birth, but has statements from neighbors of the Carkin family to the effect that she was born in 1871.

Speaking of Glacia Calla, a brother of Paul Roy to-day said:

"Glacia Calla did not occupy the position in society represented in the newspapers. This will be proved at the proper time. We have a complete record of Glacia Calla's career, and this will be disclosed when the investigation is held. My brother has placed in the hands of his counsel all the evidence necessary to justify his conduct."

LAMP COMMISSIONER HERN OUSTED BY MAYOR

NOTICE OF DISCHARGE, TO TAKE EFFECT ON MARCH 31, SERVED UPON HIM.

Notice of his discharge to take effect March 31 was served upon Superintendent of Lamps Dennis J. Hern by Mayor Hibbard to-day. Flagrant cases of "students" being carried upon the payroll of the lamp department, it is said, is at the bottom of Superintendent Hern's removal. These men, Mayor Hibbard has learned, although receiving $3.60 a day from the city, never until he assumed office performed any actual labor, being simply carried because of the use that Mayor Fitzgerald could make of them in their capacity as delegates to the Boston Central Labor Union.

Mr. Fitzgerald used these men to obtain the condemnation by the Central Labor Union of the opposing candidates for Mayor.

Almost two months ago Superintendent Hern received the intimation that Mayor Hibbard would be pleased at the removal of these men. His neglect to take the hint resulted in to-day's action.

Warning to Others.

Superintendent Hern's removal will have the effect of a warning upon other department heads who are carrying the same class of men, the Mayor believes. He is determined to rid the payroll of all grafters and "students."

The thirty days' notice is unusual and is given because Mayor Hibbard desires to straighten out the contract between the city and the Rising Sun Street Lighting Company before Superintendent Hern quits office. This contract, made by Mayor Fitzgerald a year ago, is one of the most extravagant ones ever entered into by the city, Mayor Hibbard believes. Under it the company is allowed the enormous rental of twenty per cent. per annum upon the value of its investment in street lighting in Boston. In addition it receives $7.50 per year for keeping each single burner gas lamp in the city in repair, and $15.80 for each of the triple mantle lamps. There are over 11,000 lamps in all and the revenue derived by the company is enormous, considering the amount of work it is called upon to perform.

Under this contract, it has been reported to the Finance Commission, the company is making much more money than when it handled the lighting. The contract runs until May 1 and it is Mayor Hibbard's determination that it shall not be renewed under the present terms.

Fitzgerald Appointee.

Superintendent Hern was appointed by Mayor Fitzgerald February 27, 1906, at a salary of $3,500 a year. He was transferred from the $4,000 position as health commissioner, to which he had been appointed by Mayor Collins May 1, 1903, to succeed the late Robert Cox, removed. The desire of Mayor Fitzgerald to find a place for William H. Hayes of Charlestown was the cause of the transfer of Hern to the lamp department. Hayes was appointed health commissioner and has just been removed by Mayor Hibbard. Previously, for nearly four years the superintendent of streets had acted as head of the lamp department.

Mayor Hibbard will not fill Superintendent Hern's position pending action by the Board of Aldermen on the ordinance now before that body, which consolidates the lamp department with the street department. The Mayor will, however, take immediate action in regard to the "students" upon the lamp department payroll.

GIRL HELD FOR SHOOTING KIRK

LOWELL, Feb. 28.—Charged with assault with intent to kill on her sweetheart, Frank Kirk, Mrs. Jennie Shamney was arraigned in the local court to-day before Judge Pickman and probable guilt was found. She was bound over for the grand jury and bonds were fixed at $1,000.

Mrs. Shampney is a very pretty brunette about twenty years of age and was very stylishly dressed. One of the witnesses called was Frank Kirk, against whom the assault was alleged to have committed. Annie Meader and William Pelletier were also called by the Government and corroborated the testimony of Kirk.

REPORT JAP WARSHIPS SENT AGAINST CHINA

SEIZURE OF TATSU MARU ON GROUND OF CARRYING CONTRABAND MADE PRETEXT.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Japan has sent several warships to Hongkong, according to a news agency message, to enforce a demand on China for the surrender of the Tatsu Maru, a Japanese vessel, recently seized by the Chinese off Macao on the ground that it was smuggling arms and ammunition to Chinese revolutionists.

The formal demand from Tokio upon the Pekin Government is said to have called also for indemnity for the seizure on the ground that the shipment, consigned to a Portuguese merchant at Macao, was a bona fide transaction.

It is asserted in Pekin that the consignment to a Portuguese was a mere pretext, and that there is overwhelming evidence that the shipment was contraband.

PEKIN, Feb. 28.—News that Japan has laid claim to the Yalu River islands as Korean territory has fairly paralyzed Chinese officialdom. That the islands belong to China has never before been questioned.

Though not of great extent or value, they are of some strategic importance, and to be forced to surrender them without the shadow of a protest on the Mikado's part would be the deepest possible humiliation to the Chinese. The claim is generally accepted here as a basis for trouble and as threatening to bring the increasing friction between the two governments to a crisis very soon.

No formal demand for the islands has been made, but it is assumed that the Japanese will soon attempt to seize them. China has been taken completely by surprise, and is undecided what to do, but sentiment in government circles strongly favors resistance.

4,000 PROTEST MELLEN SYSTEM OF PIECE WORK

Delegates representing over 4,000 men employed in the shops of the New Haven Railroad, at a convention held at No. 724 Washington street, will to-morrow formulate plans for united resistance to the company's introduction of the piece work system in the shops all over the system. International officers of the different trades unions will be present, and a central council will probably be formed.

A noticve posted in the shops at Readville and other places announced that the piece work system will be inaugurated March 10. To a man, the members of the unions oppose the plan, and a protest from the Joint Council will be presented to the officials of the road in a day or two. The company is firm, but the union leaders declare that unless they are paid by the day there will be a strike in every mechanical shop and roundhouse on the whole system, throwing out over four thousand employes of all trades.

Town's Principal Industry.

The largest shops on the road are at Readville. There are employed about 1,400 men. The shops themselves cover eighty-six acres, and afford the principal industry of the town. Both cars and locomotives are built and repaired at this great plant. Readville unions representing machinists, boilermakers, car workers, painters, blacksmiths, steamfitters and carpenters have already voted to rebel against the piece and bonus system and have appealed to the Joint Council, of which Thomas Wilson, international vice-president of the Machinists' Union, is chairman.

Besides the Readville shops, those which would be affected in case of a strike are located in Boston, New Haven, Harlem River, Providence, Hartford, Bridgeport. All the roundhouses would be included.

BARONESS VON ORENDORFF SPY OF A FOREIGN POWER?

Strange Stories of the Mysterious Patroness of Glacia Calla and Her Power in Diplomatic Circles at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The [illegible] of [illegible] diplomacy [illegible] to [illegible] the mystery concerning the identity of the [illegible] woman who called herself the aunt of Glacia Calla, and also the "Baroness von Orendorff." It is believed that [illegible] ambassadors or diplomats of lesser rank who might reveal facts which [illegible] enigma which is puzzling [illegible] of two continents. It is believed that the woman who claimed to be the Baroness was under investigation by foreign State departments at the close of her extraordinary Washington career, when she had a palatial home at No. 2,000 S street and entertained there so lavishly that invitations to her house were sought by the highest in the land.

If there was not such investigation it was because of suspicion by the diplomats of at least one country that she was a spy in the pay of another. From the beginning of her social campaign in this city this mysterious woman, who dressed so expensively [illegible] like a person of unlimited means, [illegible] young diplomats. Younger [illegible] of the diplomatic corps were so numerous among her guests at every function that it was said that all the state secrets of Europe were housed under her roof. Diplomats are supposed to be the most secretive of all persons, but sometimes when young and wine is flowing they have been known to talk.

In Employ of Foreign Power?

Shrewd residents of Washington who were on the "inside" and never dazzled by the glitter of an establishment which vied with the best in the capital, used to ask themselves, if not each other, if this woman of mystery was not in reality the agent of some foreign government?

All European governments use women to learn the secrets of rival powers when extraordinary finesse is required on the part of the agent. But Russia is supposed to be the country most given to such tactics. However, there were also suspicions that the mysterious Baroness was in the employ of the Sultan of Turkey.

She directed her social campaign especially against the German Embassy. When it was directed by a charge d'affaires during the absence of Dr. Von Holleben, she managed to get into the homes of some of the secretaries. Something must have occurred which made her persona non grata to Germany. Dr. Von Holleben had [illegible] to investigate her and [illegible] to a title. As a result her value as a secret agent to any foreign government was at an end, if she ever served in any such capacity. The diplomats in Washington dropped her. Her salon was deserted by all who knew the secrets of statecraft.

A Mysterious Letter

Dr. von Holleben, the German ambassador, stated [illegible] years ago that there was a German person of the title under which the woman was known, but that no one had had the right to call himself baron or herself baroness for half a century. This meant that the woman was diplomatically called an adventuress.

How she got so far into diplomatic circles is a question that the diplomats probably looked up very thoroughly, but if any government was [illegible] through secret [illegible] her gaining an entree which [illegible] of undoubted [illegible] and great wealth, the facts never got to the public.

When she began her remarkable career in Washington, she had letters to Mustapha Bey, [illegible] from Turkey. It was through such an introduction that she became acquainted first with members of the Turkish legation, and after that with attaches of others. It is said that she used her diplomatic circle of friends to import duty free goods that would have netted a fortune to the United States in revenue charges.

There is a story whispered in Washington [illegible] about her obtaining a mysterious letter from a member of the cabinet. The nature of the letter is unknown except to a very, very few, but it is said to have been so important that the German government took action in the matter. Perhaps it was this letter that led Dr. von Holleben to look up her title. Perhaps this letter was used for the benefit of Russia and the detriment of Germany.

But in the end, when she retired from Washington, very little was known about her by society or the public. Perhaps the secret service men of the United States found out a great deal. She was never, it appears, held in much confidence by prominent Americans at the capital. One member of congress ordered her from his house when it was filled with guests.

Had Come Unbidden.

She had come there unbidden, it was said. It was thought, after the diplomats dropped her from their social list, that she lobbied for certain railroad interests. But every circle of society appears to have finally shut doors in her handsome, distinguished face. All this was without the slightest scandal. She was too clever to ever do anything which invited publicity. Her house was magnificently furnished, and when she sold its appointments they brought high prices. When she disappeared little more was really known about her than when she first began to dazzle young diplomats by her gorgeous dinners and other entertainments. She kept as clear of women as possible. Her penchant was bachelor parties.

She let it be assumed that she was of the best Maryland blood. That her ancestors were Carrolls and Calverts. But investigations in the genealogical lines showed that the branches of those families to which she claimed relationship were extinct. It was thought by the remarks she made that she was a daughter of the late Admiral [illegible], U. S. N., and that was the name of the delicate-looking [illegible] who was her son, or passed as such.

Glacia's Visits Not Frequent

Glacia Calla was presented to Washington society as the niece of the Baroness, but her visits to her aunt were not frequent and she [illegible] at the capital. Once she [illegible] swell function [illegible]. She was supposed to [illegible] stage career, but to have left [illegible] obedience to the wish of [illegible] a wealthy French nobleman [illegible] on the Washington scene.

But despite the [illegible] emanated from the German embassy to the effect that the [illegible] extinct, it is said that there is [illegible] Baroness von Orendorff [illegible] in Washington and at No. 1910 [illegible] street, which is almost [illegible] walk from where the woman [illegible] bearer of the title gave sumptuous entertainments.

The Baroness living on [illegible] street states, it is understood, she has no knowledge of the other woman and never heard of Glacia Calla.

When Glacia Calla first attracted the attention of the American colony in Paris she was chaperoned by a woman who called herself Baroness von Orendorff, and said she was the widow of a German diplomat who had been attached to the St. Petersburg embassy. Miss Calla said that the Baroness was her aunt. The young woman was studying music in Paris under the best teachers. She and the Baroness had an apartment in the Rue Hamelin, at which brilliant musicales were given.

Sought Social Recognition

Both are said to have striven hard for social recognition in the [illegible] and one of the stories told about the couple is that Miss Calla paid $100 to a woman of social prominence to chaperon her at the meeting of a sewing circle whose members were among the most exclusive girls in the American colony.

Miss Calla and the Baroness suddenly terminated their sojourn in the French capital. When they disembarked upon the French line pier in New York the Baroness was indignant because of the espionage of two men, said to be detectives, but she explained that she had been shadowed for "political reasons."

It is said in Paris that the Baroness von Orendorff, about whose identity there is so much confusion, was formerly a yearly visitor to Paris, where the Hotel Continental was her favorite hotel. She came every Summer and never alone. Always there were one or two pretty American girls with her. They were always introduced by the Baroness as nieces. One was a tall blonde calling herself Maude Roosevelt [illegible]. It was in Paris that she introduced Glacia Calla as her niece. The number and beauty of the Baroness's nieces had created a good deal of comment. Her introduction of Miss Calla was "This is the best beloved of all my nieces."

One story afloat in Paris is that they met there a young American millionaire, who once sailed for home on the same steamer with the Baroness and Miss Calla. It is said that he gave them $100,000 before he reached New York.

GLACIA INTENDED TO FREE HUSBAND?

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 28.—Sheriff Marcus M. Collis believes that Glacia Calla, loving her husband, Paul E. Roy, protected him so that he could escape the country and refuge in his native land and go scot free of her brother's murder.

He declares that regardless of threats the woman had a dozen opportunities to give Roy up to justice. He adds that he is informed she lived with Roy as a loving wife for many days after the slaying of George Carkin.

"It's peculiar," said Sheriff Collis tonight, "that Glacia Calla kept her story of crime hidden from the authorities so long. George Carkin died on the night of January 2. Mrs. Roy, or Miss Calla, as she now desires to be called, had plenty of time that night to notify the authorities of her husband's crime.

Ignored the Dead Body.

"Roy dashed to Portsmouth in an auto that night to get an aunt of his wife's [illegible] to the Newington house. A telephone is only a half mile away, but Mrs. Roy did not telephone.

"That night she occupied the same room with her husband at Newington. The dead body of her brother rested in the butler's pantry. Mr. and Mrs. Roy slept in an adjoining room.

"Roy left Portsmouth on January 9, but no word came to the authorities from the wife, no intimation other than that which the medical referee reported—that George Carkin died a suicide.

"Roy went to New York and his wife went also. They were together in New York.

"On February 8, Roy sailed for Queenstown on the Lusitania. He arrived there on February 14. Mrs. Roy told her story to us on February 20.

"If she had told it on the night of the shooting, and she had plenty time while her husband was dashing to Portsmouth in his auto, we could have arrested Roy. If she had told it after that, up to February 8, when Roy sailed from New York on the Cunarder, we could have had him apprehended.

"We have learned since that he was in Newburyport, Boston and New York, for a week after the shooting, until the Lusitania sailed, but we did not hear from Mrs. Roy until the ship had left Queenstown and until Roy was in France.

"The Lusitania reached Queenstown February 14, Roy was in France February 17, and Mrs. Roy told her story to us on February 20. Had she given us her story only a few days earlier we could have caught Roy at Queenstown.

"But she waited from January 2, when the shots were fired, up to February 20. I don't believe we can get Roy back from France.

"It will at least be a difficult thing to do. But I do believe that the officials of Rockingham County should have been apprised earlier of the details of a crime.

"Mrs. Roy says she loved her brother more than she did her husband. Why should she have protected the slayer—and the slaying almost before her eyes—of the man whom in all the world she loved the best?

"Our researches show that from January 2 until February 20 she had no reason to fear her husband. She slept at night by his side, at times after the shooting, had plenty of opportunity to acquaint the police with the details of the shooting, but didn't do so. Why?

"That is what baffles the authorities of Rockingham County.

"Roy was beyond our reach before we knew that crime was committed. I will not say that Mrs. Roy held back her information until she knew that he was beyond our reach, but her failure to tell all she knew at the time when she should have threw obstacles in our path that we are now trying to surmount.

"I tried to see Mrs. Roy to-day at Newington, but missed her. I will see her to-morrow.

"The Paris police have ben cabled to arest Roy, and any minute I expect to hear of his apprehension."

BIGGEST COD EVER CAUGHT

The grandfather of all the codfish family was brought into T wharf yesterday in the hold of the Provincetown fishing sloop Vesta. It topped the scales at just ninety-seven pounds and is the largest cod ever landed at the fish pier.

The fish was caught off Plymouth, and when the fishermen brought it to the surface they could not believe it was a cod. It required all the strength of one of the crew to lift it into the dory. It attracted considerable attention among the dealers and fishermen. They all pronounced it the biggest cod they had ever seen.

GLACIA HAUNTED BY HER BROTHER'S FACE

Wife of Roy Near Breakdown as Result of Ordeal—May Be Placed Under Arrest to Be Held as Witness.

Special to the Boston American.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 28.—Glacia Calla is breaking down under the ordeal of the past six weeks. She had promised her counsel, Colonel John H. Bartlett, to come to Portsmouth for a conference at 3 o'clock to-day, but pleaded for delay by telephone.

"I am worn out," she said. "This terrible experience is breaking me down. Last night was one of haunted dreams. My brother's face as I saw it on that awful night is ever before me."

When Miss Calla reached Mr. Bartlett's office for the belated conference later in the day her face wore the pallor of death. She seemed to be on the verge of a break down and faltered as she walked from her carriage to the lawyer's office. A wan smile lighted up her face for a moment as she went to the conference, which is made doubly important in view of the fact that the prosecuting officers of Rockingham County openly assert they are not satisfied with Miss Calla's story of the tragedy.

May Order Glacia's Arrest.

Glacia Calla is a practical prisoner within the borders of the State of New Hampshire. Should she attempt to leave the State she would immediately be arrested and detained according to the program which has been outlined by County Solicitor Batchelder. As the pivotal witness in the case of State against her husband, Paul E. Roy, for the slaying of Carkin, it may be found necessary to formally arrest her even if she quietly remains within New Hampshire jurisdiction.

It is stated by one close to the prosecution that Miss Calla may be arrested as a witness within twenty-four hours.

Attorney-General Edward G. Eastman and County Solicitor Charles E. Batchelder left Portsmouth on the 8:50 train to-day for Concord. They carried with them copies of the warrant sworn out against Paul Etienne Roy and also the affidavits of Glacia Calla, [illegible] and Mrs. John D. Kelley, Dr. William O. Junkins and Medical Referee William H. Nute.

They will meet Secretary of State Pearson early to-day and with Governor Charles M. Floyd will start the machinery of the law moving for the extradition of Roy from France.

Attorney-General Eastman says that before the day is over the proper papers will be on their way to the State Department in Washington.

"I feel confident that there is law enough to bring Roy back here to justice," [illegible] Concord.

"Bring the man, my husband, back here, try him, hang him, and you will do me a [illegible]," declared Glacia Calla.

She is [illegible]

[illegible] in New York, and [illegible] express doubts as to whether Roy can be extradited and tried here. Sheriff [illegible] his purpose to secure the [illegible] and bring [illegible] trial.

"It may cost the county of Rockingham $10,000, but the [illegible] of the State is long enough to reach across the ocean to apprehend the murderer of one of New Hampshire's sons," said the sheriff grimly.

The sheriff [illegible] that if necessary, the State will prosecute Roy in France, that he will be tried there and punished there if convicted, [illegible].

"Murder Shall Be Avenged."

The purpose for vengeance never falters in the mind of beautiful Glacia Calla. When she had signed her name to affidavits accusing the man she had formerly loved of the murder of her brother, she cried:

"I will avenge my brother. He was cruelly slain, and whatever of my past may be bared to disclose the truth I will take the sacrifice. His murderer shall be avenged."

Last evening when she entered her mother's home and saw the photograph of her brother on a table nearly facing her, she cried:

"It was cruel to kill you, George. Your death shall not go unavenged."

EXPERTS DIFFER ON ROY EXTRADITION

Can Paul Emile Roy be extradited from France and brought back from Paris to Portsmouth for trial on the charge of murdering his brother-in-law, George A. Carkin?

The extradition treaty of 1843 between the United States and France says:

"Persons shall be so delivered up who shall be charged, according to the provisions of this convention, with any of the following crimes, to wit: Murder (comprehending the crimes designated in the French penal code by the terms 'assassination,' 'parricide,' 'infanticide' and 'poisoning'), with an attempt to commit murder, with forgery, or with arson, or with embezzlement by public officers, when the same is punishable with infamous punishment."

A member of the famous French law firm of Coudert Brothers of New York, who is regarded as an authority on international law, declares that the extradition treaty with France does not require that nation to surrender its own citizens for crime in another country.

"There is no possible chance under the law of bringing Paul E. Roy to New Hampshire for trial. French law will not permit extradition, no matter how serious the charge," he says.

Warrant Is Issued.

Attorney-General Eastman of New Hampshire, however, is positive that he can secure the extradition of Roy, and has already begun steps to bring the beautiful Glacia Calla's husband back to New Hampshire. The issuance of a warrant against Roy, charging murder in the first degree, six copies of which Governor Floyd is sending the State Department to be forwarded to Paris, is the first act in this international requisition process. County Solicitor Batchelder of Rockingham County shares the belief of Attorney-General Eastman that Roy must be given up by France on demand by the United States.

The New Hampshire officers hold that the treaty, in saying "persons," does not differentiate between French or American citizens, and that France is bound to deliver up its own subjects as quickly as Americans.

Despite the positive statement of the member of the firm of Coudert Brothers, Attorney Eastman, Solicitor Batchelder and Sheriff Collis are determined, therefore, to bring the famed beauty's husband to American shores for trial. "It may cost Rockingham County $10,000," said Sheriff Collis to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN, "but the law of the State is long enough and short enough to reach across the ocean, to apprehend the murderer of one of New Hampshire's sons."

May Prosecute in France.

In case the State Department finds it impossible to secure the extradition of Roy, the Granite State prosecutors will see that justice is done, even if they have to prosecute him on French soil. In case the fugitive claims the protection of his French citizenship, the New Hampshire authorities are prepared to present evidence against him in the courts at Paris. It is believed that rather than risk a speedy conviction at home, Roy might take his chances in America.

Roy may even decide to waive extradition, come to America of his own volition and plead self-defence at his trial. Many shrewd lawyers hold that it would be hard to convict him, even if he were guilty, unless his wife, Glacia Calla, actually saw the first shot fired in the kitchen tragedy.

A precedent for a trial abroad was afforded by the case of an Italian named Di Biasi, who killed a Jewish official in Boston several years ago. He could not be extradited under the treaty, as he was a citizen of Italy. Through depositions presented by Chief Watts and [illegible] Rosatto of this city, the fugitive was convicted of manslaughter in [illegible].

SUMMER REVELS IN GLACIA'S BUNGALOW

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 28.—Glacia Calla, famous in her beauty, set the heads of Portsmouth awhirl last Summer before her marriage to Paul Etienne Roy. She came here in the early Spring fresh from the conquest of courts and nabobs across the water.

She was welcomed. A bungalow was provided for her on Fox Point, on Great Bay. It was built for her by a Boston clubman on the ground of a Portsmouth clubman.

Humble in the exterior, this bungalow was a revel of rich extravagance inside. Heavy chains of silver which rang a symphony of bells guarded the [illegible] were paintings burned into [illegible] work and rich tapestries on [illegible].

In this sylvan retreat there [illegible] gatherings of the favored which [illegible] the feasts of Lucullus. Champagne [illegible] water. It was an abode of [illegible] lotus dreams.

Glacia Calla, with some girl friends, was the centre of the joviality. [illegible] revels at Fox Point are [illegible] said, Portsmouth's high society [illegible] a quiver.

To-day, Glacia Calla's bungalow [illegible] Point was attached in a suit [illegible] a Parisian modiste who is seeking [illegible] for expensive gowns.

GLACIA BOUNTIFUL TO POOR AT HOME

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 28.—Glacia Calla's charities are not forgotten by Portsmouth or Newington. With the gold she has wrung from adventure she has been a Lady Bountiful.

Last Christmas as her honeymoon days were waning and the crucial days of her tragedy were near, she rushed into Portsmouth in an auto with her husband, Paul E. Roy, as chauffeur and purchased turkeys and good things for over twenty families.

Glacia Calla, out of the tithes of earth which came to her, made every poor neighbor within her ken glad. They asked no questions of this beauty of [illegible] hidden romance.

To-day they call her blessed and [illegible] news of her home-coming [illegible] scores thronged about the K[illegible] Newington to offer mute [illegible] to the bounteous beauty.

It is estimated by conservative Portsmouth people that within the past three years Glacia Calla has spent [illegible] $5,000 in charity among the [illegible] the vicinity of her early home.

Born in poverty she has not [illegible]. From the splendors of Paris [illegible] of London she has brought [illegible] tial remembrances to the poor [illegible] of her childhood days.

TRAGEDY RECALLS MABEL PAGE CASE

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 28.—"Worse than the Mabel Page case in Massachusetts," said a prominent Portsmouth attorney to-night, "was the quick offhand report of the medical referee here in New Hampshire."

"Suicide," said the medical examiner first in Massachusetts.

"Suicide," first said our medical referee here and his first report was as quick and as offhand as was the report of the Massachusetts medical examiner.

"In Massachusetts an undertaker was the first to discover that Mabel Page died from the hand of a murderer. Here [illegible] in New Hampshire an awful crime would be [illegible] past medical referee and [illegible] until a woman's lips revealed the story of a hidden crime.

"Tucker went to the chair, but [illegible] a hurried examination by a medical examiner of Massachusetts showed [illegible] that day in early Spring was [illegible] Auburndale.

"Here's a case almost parallel.

"It was 10 o'clock the day [illegible] the dead body of George Carkin was found in the butler's pantry of that Newington house before any medical official of the [illegible] viewed the body.

"It was still in the butler's pantry, [illegible] over. There was the ghastly wound in the forehead and the blood [illegible] face.

"With the stories of the only two present at the time of the shooting, with no further examination or investigation, a verdict of suicide was the return of the medical referee.

"The regular referee of Rockingham County is Dr. A. J. Lance. Dr. Lance has for months been in New York taking a course of study in the eye and ear [illegible] January.

"He delegated Dr. William H. Nute of Exeter to act in his stead. Dr. Nute by his superficial examination reported suicide.

"But for a woman's faltering, no matter what the motive that impelled her, a social crime would have been hidden."

PARIS MODISTE SUES GLACIA CALLA FOR FINE DRESSES

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 28.—Glacia Calla, or Mrs. Paul E. Roy, next week defends a suit for 4,480 francs, or $896, brought against her by Georgette Dorothy [illegible], Parisian dressmaker, [illegible] and work done.

The case, which was brought in the Rockingham county courts [illegible] will be called before Judge Pike at Exeter next Monday. It is filed against "Mademoiselle Glacia Calla." Here are the items:

[illegible]

Attorney John H. Bartlett will appear for Glacia Calla in the suit, while Attorney John W. Kelley will appear for the Paris dressmaking firm.

BISHOPS COMPLAIN OF "JIM CROW" CARS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Five bishops of the African M. E. Church have joined in a complaint to the Interstate Commerce Commission of unjust discriminatory treatment at the hands of several Southern roads. The complainants were Bishops Wesley J. Gaines, H. M. Turner, [illegible], C. S. Smith and J. W. Lampton.

They allege that the passenger coaches furnished to them when they purchase first class transportation "are dirty and [illegible]" and that the coaches furnished white passengers are better in quality and [illegible].

RISK LIVES TO SAVE 200 MEN BURIED IN MINE

MONTEREY, Mexico, Feb. 28.—Rescue parties are making desperate efforts to reach the 200 men entombed by yesterday's explosion in Mine No. 3 at Rosita, in the heart of the Coahuila coal fields.

The gas is still so thick, however, that but little progress is being made and the rescuers are working in peril of their own lives. Several have already been brought out unconscious. It will probably be several days before men buried in the remotest part of the workings can be reached.

The entombed miners are all Mexicans or Japanese, but several American foremen and engineers were in the mine at the time of the explosion. It is feared most of those in the workings must have already succumbed.

TWO CHICAGO BANKS TO BE CONSOLIDATED

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Arrangements which practically have been concluded for the consolidation of the American Trust and Savings Banks and the Hibernian Banking Association, with a deposit account of $18,000,000 and a capital of $1,500,000, have stirred La Salle street financial circles. The negotiations were originally taken up last July between the presidents of the two institutions, but were interrupted by the financial upheaval of the Fall.

ASKS POLICE AID TO FIND MISSING BOY

[illegible] his son, Louis Malta, of No. 11 [illegible] street, has appealed to the police in an endeavor to locate the [illegible] son, Harry, who has been missing since January 16.

Harry attended the North Bennet street [illegible] school up to the time of his disappearance and was a [illegible]. When he left home on the evening of January 16 he had 10 cents with which to purchase papers. He was dressed in a dark mixed overcoat, [illegible] trousers, and sweater with white stripes and a small skull cap. He speaks almost perfect English and is four feet six inches in height.

Mr. Malta is all the more perplexed because of the fact that his wife, who with four other children was [illegible] in Russia [illegible] one year and a half ago, is expected here within a short time.

LAWRENCE MAN IS SHOT TO DEATH

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 28.—A man known as "Blacky" Collins, said to be a member of a prominent family of Lawrence, Mass., was shot and killed last night by Ed Venesson, better known as "Kid Silk." Collins's failure to take a drink and dance when ordered was the cause of the tragedy. The alleged murderer escaped.

WOODBURY NEAR DEATH ILL IN CELL

Foxcroft Hotel Owner Held Without Bail on Charge of Wife Murder.

TRIAL NOW IN SEPTEMBER

DOVER, Me., Feb 28.—Back in a little dark and damp cell in the [illegible] Jail sits Herbert Woodbury, held without bail for the September term of the Grand Jury on the charge of having murdered his wife, Phoebe Marie Woodbury, on November [illegible] in the Foxcroft Exchange, of which he was proprietor.

The seven months in jail may prove a life sentence for the hotel keeper. His last week behind the prison bars has wrecked his health. Already a victim of heart disease, he is now crippled with rheumatism and his physicians say that they fear he will never live to face trial.

Three days were taken up with the hearing of the mysterious case, which has stirred the entire State and so widespread is the interest that the lawyers for the defence already claim that it will be a difficult task to secure a jury which will give their client a fair and impartial trial.

Detective Feature Witness.

State Detective Leader of Lewiston was the principal witness at the closing session. He identified [illegible] and other papers found in the room with the dead body. He testified to going to the Exchange Hotel and the finding of the body, as has already been described by previous witnesses.

He said when he entered the room the body lay on the right side, the back resting in a noose, the pressure of the rope was on the right side of the neck and the knot on the left side.

He told of his conversation with Woodbury after the finding of the body and said:

"Woodbury told me he went to Bangor to hire Detective Dennis Tracey to catch his wife, but Tracey had another job. He said he drove home the thirty-five miles that night and while he and his wife had some words, they did not quarrel.

Bought His Wife Back.

"He said his wife had often gone away and left him, and once he paid her $100 to come back. He had bought her back, and said he was willing to buy her back again, he loved her so.

"He said she was nervous one night, standing at the window looking for some one, and when he looked out he saw a man walking up and down in front of the house, who, he thought, was waiting for her. Another night he saw a man with her on Main street.

"Woodbury knew I was a detective, that his wife had been found dead and that he was under arrest, and yet he told everything frankly and freely. He kept back nothing.

"He said he was anxious to have the whole truth come out and if any one had murdered his wife he hoped they would be caught and punished. He said he would aid all he could in the search for the guilty."

Burgess and Brown Have Tilt.

The sensation of the day came when County Attorney Burgess referred in his argument to the fact that C. W. Brown, counsel for the accused man, was the first to notify Coroner [illegible] of the fact that he was wanted at the hotel.

This was before the body was found. Mr. Brown was immediately upon his feet and flushing angrily, said: "Do you mean to insinuate, sir, that I am an accessory to the crime of murder and that I knew this woman's body was in that room?"

"I do not," replied Mr. Burgess.

"You do insinuate that!" replied Mr. Brown.

Judge Smith was obliged to interrupt the interchange of hot language.

After going over the evidence very briefly, the court ordered the prisoner held.

WESTON LAUDS MARCHING LADS OF HIS NATIVE CITY

TELLS OF PRIDE IN YOUTHFUL BAND AND HEARTY WELCOME GIVEN AT PROVIDENCE.

BY EDWARD PAYSON WESTON.

I WISH I could command words adequate to express the gratification the members of the "Edward Payson Weston Walking Club" in Providence gave me yesterday. They were over 1,000 strong and marched like little soldiers. They belong to the beautiful city in which I was born, and most assuredly the thousands who lined the sidewalks and lustily cheered them as we passed up Broad street and Elmwood avenue, to the Roger Williams Park, were as delighted as I was proud of their stalwart appearance.

Exceeded Expectations.

The spectacle far exceeded my most sanguine expectations. I feel that a large share of the success of this eventful march of nearly five miles is due to the generous help of the Manufacturers' Outlet Company in distributing the "Walking Club" buttons and in so kindly permitting the "Hikers' Walking Club" in their employ to head the "Walking Column."

Added to this was the inspiring music furnished by Fay's band, which in effectiveness excelled any band I have heard in New York or Boston of twenty-five pieces. And I can never forget that the large-hearted and efficient chief of police, Mr. Patrick Egan, endorsed the efforts of the young men and bright lads of Providence by allowing a dozen of the finest looking policemen in the world to accompany the parade over the entire route.

Hearty Greeting for Walkers

And the climax came when His Honor Mayor McCarthy gave the "walkers" a hearty greeting when they arrived at the Roger Williams Park and warmly complimented them on their manly appearance and courteous conduct.

Providence should be proud of its young men and boys, for they show the effect of the invigorating air and the educational advantages of this grand old city. I'm very proud of the showing made by the sturdy manhood, which encouraged my humble efforts to elevate in popular esteem the glorious exercise of walking, and I shall always esteem it a blessed privilege to tell the world of the gentlemanly walkers they are always sure to find in Providence, R. I. Keep on, my friends, and you will soon be in a condition to show that there are a lot more Edward Payson Westons in my native city.

WESTON WELCOMED AT PROVIDENCE

As a fitting climax to the walks of the E. P. Weston Walking Club in cities outside of Boston, Edward Payson Weston yesterday afternoon led between four and five thousand enthusiastic young men, boys and girls through the streets of his native city of Providence, R. I.

It was a great triumph for the master walker. From the moment when he stepped before the vast crowd gathered in Cathedral square in front of the Doyle monument, where they were held in check through the heroic efforts of a dozen patrolmen and mounted officers, until he arrived at Roger Williams Park, it was a constant ovation.

Starting with ranks so full that they made a good sized parade, the crowd behind Mr. Weston increased until at Roger Williams Park, where an address was made by Mayor Patrick J. McCarthy, there were probably 5,000 people in sight. No such gathering has ever before been seen in Providence.

School Boys in Line.

The start was made at 4 o'clock in order that the school boys might have an opportunity to join the parade. Before that hour Fay's American Band, under the leadership of F. M. Fay, gave a concert. On the arrival of Mr. Weston the band played "Hail to the Chief" and the crowd cheered themselves hoarse.

As escort to Mr. Weston came the Outlet Hikers' Club, consisting of W. S. Solomon, president; George Hearne, vice-president; G. A. Rollinwood, secretary and treasurer; W. A. Whipple, photographer; F. Lipp, P. Nathan, G. Moir, B. Ross, T. H. Pilkington, J. Washer, D. B. Whipple, J. Herman, J. S. Gettner, H. H. Catharine and George Wood. They formed in behind the banner of the BOSTON AMERICAN E. P. Weston Walking Club and the American flag. Mr. Hearne and Mr. Rollinwood walked beside the veteran pedestrian.

The police managed to make way for the parade through the surging lines of people, and when the leader gave the word the great crowd broke into cheer after cheer.

The line of march was through Exchange street to Board street to Elmwood avenue to Reservoir avenue to [illegible] street to Grace Church to Park avenue to Dorle, Clarence and Wenzart streets, Elmwood avenue to Roger Williams Park.

In the parade there were young and old. Beside Mr. Weston walked little May Harrington, twelve years old, of No. 72 Chestnut street, a rosy cheeked miss, who knew how to keep in step and who explained that she was quite used to walking. Back in the line was a man somewhat bent with age who made the entire distance of five miles and who said that he knew Mr. Weston as a boy.

"I'm a little older than he is," the man said, "but I want to show him that there are others of the old boys who are still spry."

One hundred boys of the Olneyville Boys' Club, in charge of Superintendent Floyd S. Doughty, joined the march at Cathedral square. They were a strong looking lot of lads and they made a fine addition to the parade.

Weston's Sisters Were There.

On Dorle street a halt was made in front of the home of Mr. Weston's sister, Mrs. Ellen M. Delehin, who although seventy-four years of age, had never seen her distinguished brother on any of his walks. Another sister, Mrs. Curtis, was present with several of the veteran's nieces. The marchers gave them three hearty cheers.

When Mayor McCarthy arrived in front of the little recreation building in Roger Williams Park, he too received an ovation. In introducing him to the crowd, Mr. Weston took occasion to tell those who had followed him what a lot he thought of the boys of Providence.

At the conclusion of the Mayor's address, Mr. Weston dismissed the parade, while the band played "The Star Spangled Banner" and hats were raised.

BOYLE BROS.' EMPLOYES AT ANNUAL BALL

The 400 persons who attended the sixth annual ball of the Boyle Bros.' employes at Howe Hall, Huntington avenue, last night, are today convinced that the entertainment was the most enjoyable yet held.

The costumes of the ladies were brilliant. Mrs. Thomas F. Boyle wore a beautiful empire gown of light blue messaline, with filet lace and diamond ornaments.

The one regret of the dancers was that Messrs. E. J. and T. F. Boyle were unable to attend the ball. Through a telegram received during the evening, they expressed their regrets from New Orleans that they could not be present.

A buffet lunch was served from 11:30 till midnight.

The invited guests included George Wilson, J. F. Lewis, Mark Andrews, Clifford Pierce, John Kelly, Arthur Cunningham, Joseph Manning, John Kelleher, Thomas Cummings, Charles Beckwith, Henry Arnold, William Hagan, Edward Burke, Thomas F. Dennessey, Dr. F. E. Walsh, Frank Manning, William Armitage, Thomas Flannagan, Neil Mahoney, James McDonough, John Burke, William Anderson, Burke Lynch and Frank Rowean.

The entertainment was in charge of James Fitzpatrick and the following assistants: Lawrence T. Plunkett, D. J. Larkin, Robert Bruce, S. V. Coonan, Herman Sartoris, Lloyd Young, William Dacey, Edward Hurley, Francis Murphy, Edward Monahan, George Taylor, George Nowell and George McLaughlin.

PLAN LEAGUE CLUBS IN ALL BOSTON WARDS

Plans for organizing Independence League clubs in every ward in Boston were discussed last night at the regular meeting of the Independence League City Committee at its headquarters, room No. 318, Old South building. Chairman John T. Dobbyn of South Boston presided.

Resolutions were adopted condemning House Bill No. 208, which provides that non-resident taxpayers of Boston shall be allowed to vote on municipal questions. The bill's purpose was denounced as "unfair to the citizens of Boston."

It was voted to increase the membership of the League's city committee to one for each 400 votes cast in each ward for Thomas L. Hisgen for Governor. Alexander Cohen, John A. Kenny, John M. Pease, Emil Breitenbach and William C. Johnston were appointed to arrange a city committee banquet.

BURGLARS ROB WESTWOOD STATION

WESTWOOD, Feb 28.—Smashing a window to get into the waiting room and then bursting open the door of the ticket office, burglars last night robbed the Islington station on the Midland division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad of $8 worth of tickets.

NEW MEMBER FOR LEAGUE

William Randolph Cohen, a blue-eyed little bit of humanity who has known this world but two weeks, is the newest honorary member of the Independence League of this city. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis R. Cohen of No. 31 Gay Head street, Roxbury. The proud father was one of the first men in this city to enroll in the new party, which has now become the second in the State.

Next Sunday Master Cohen will be christened "William Randolph," in honor of the founder of the party in whose membership list he has just been enrolled. Joseph Hawes, another ardent Leaguer, will be the little lad's godfather. Mrs. Hawes will assume the role of godmother. Little William Randolph is No. 6 in a group of Cohen little ones.

FELL 30 FEET; UNHURT.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb 28.—A fall of thirty feet through a skylight, with no bones broken, was the feat of Helen McSweeney, the eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McSweeney of Bond street, this afternoon.

The rule for old people is one Cascaret daily. The bowels, like other muscles, grow less active with age. They need help.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation.

The condition is perfectly natural.

It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly, For age is never so active as youth.

The muscles are less elastic.

And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets.

And most of them need them daily.

One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels.

The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at sixty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics.

Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day.

What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm.

And there is no matter of choice here.

The only such tonic is Cascarets.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The price is 50 cents, 25 cents and 10 Cents per Box.

I Have Been Criticized For
Talking So Much About Myself & My Clothing Sale

Several prominent [illegible] men have told me that it looked conceited in me to talk so much about myself, my sale—that is, my use of the first person I in addressing the people. Maybe it does sound a bit vain, but I pledge you my word that it isn't vanity or conceit, it is merely self-confidence in my product, the men who make it and myself. I once worked at the bench—have tackled all branches of the manufacture of clothing and now own the largest establishment in the world at Rochester, N. Y., for the manufacture of high grade clothing. In fact

I AM THE MAN WHO MADE ROCHESTER FAMOUS

for its fine clothes. Every high-class clothing retailer in the U. S. knows that my goods helped more than any to give Rochester its great reputation for fine clothing. I know the quality of every bit of cloth and materials that go into the makeup of my product and I know the high calibre of my men who make it, so I am about to talk to you, the public, in the first person, and I will guarantee, personally, everything you buy of me. I am the man who broke the clothing prices in Boston, and I am now selling $15 and $18 and $20 values for $5—there are strong financial and business reasons for doing this. I must win in Boston.

AMERICAN PETITION HALTS MELLEN'S TROLLEY GRABS

SUPREME COURT MASTER FINDS NEW HAVEN TRIED TO EVADE LAW BY MEANS OF "HOLDING COMPANY."

Action instituted by the BOSTON AMERICAN to stop the grabbing of Massachusetts trolley companies by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad led to the finding by Winfield Scott Slocum, the master named last year by the Supreme Court, that the road has by a subterfuge tried to evade the statutes.

Louis D. Brandeis, who is fighting the merger, declares that the New Haven undertook to "defy our Massachusetts law."

The subterfuge is a "holding company."

This newspaper, through Attorney Junius T. Auerbach, made the first move against the trolley "grabber" on June 11, 1907, when Lawyer Auerbach filed with Attorney General Malone a petition asking him to proceed at law against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, which company, this newspaper claimed, was misusing its charter.

The Attorney General held, at that time, that the proper place for the BOSTON AMERICAN'S petition was before the Railroad Commission. Earlier in the year, however, the Legislature had passed, and the Governor had approved "An Act relative to Restraining by Injunction Corporations from Transacting Unauthorized Business." This law, under which Mr. Malone proceeded in October, called for a "relation by the Commissioner of Corporations" to the Attorney General.

Pursued by Attorney General Malone for trolley grabbing, and about to hear the fate of the trolley mergers handed down by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, Charles Sanger Mellen, Josiah Benton, Jr., and their associates in the New Haven Railroad rely upon Malone against Malone.

In 1906, it was said to-day, Attorney General Malone, advising the Legislature on anti-merger legislation, expressed serious doubts of the effectiveness of the law under which, in part, he has been proceeding in the trolley cases.

An INDIRECT Merger.

The final report of City Solicitor Winfield Scott Slocum of Newton, named by the Supreme Court last year a master to "hear the evidence" in the trolley merger suits of Malone against the New Haven, was filed yesterday. A decision from the Court, on the points of law involved, is expected at an early date.

Master Slocum finds that the evidence does not show that the New Haven has DIRECTLY acquired the street railways.

The law forbids either DIRECT or INDIRECT acquisition.

The Master's summary of ten facts, however, is declared by the anti-mergerites to be a finding that the New Haven has taken over the trolley lines INDIRECTY.

The railroad people say that the anti-mergerites are due for a rude awakening. "We are not a Massachusetts corporation," they say. And here they quote Malone against Malone.

Malone's Opinion in 1906.

"It is doubtful," Mr. Malone said in a message to the Legislature, June 23, 1906, "if either of these statutes can effectively prevent a transaction of the character described when such transaction is the act of a corporation chartered in another State and is done in and under the lawful authority of that State."

The "statutes" to which Mr. Malone referred in this communication were a bill proposed at that time and, practically, the act under which he eventually proceeded in the present action.

New Haven Not Scared.

Relying implicitly on the opinion of Josiah H. Benton, Jr., recognized as a legislative and legal authority for more than a quarter of a century, the New York, New Haven & Hartford looks forward without apparent fear to the decision of the Supreme Judicial Court on the "findings of fact" reported by Master Slocum on the information in equity filed by Attorney-General Malone.

Master Slocum, appointed to "hear the evidence" and make report of his findings of fact, has filed his final report. There are 450 pages of it, in two typewritten volumes.

The statute law, apparently, forbids a railroad corporation DIRECTLY or INDIRECTLY to subscribe for, take or hold the stock or bonds of, or guarantee the bonds or dividends of, any other corporation.

Whose Victory Is It.

"The evidence does not show that the New York, New Haven & Hartford," says the Master, "has DIRECTLY acquired or held the stock, bonds and securities of the street railways named in the information."

"A victory for the railroad," says Railroad Attorneys Benton and Choate.

"On the question whether it has INDIRECTLY held or acquired such stock, bonds and securities, I make the following summary of facts."

Attorney-General Malone read the "summary of facts" and declared the Slocum findings to be a "victory" for the Commonwealth.

Louis D. Brandeis, Esq., who is fighting the New Haven's grab of the Boston & Maine system, declared to-day that the Slocum finding makes plain at least one important fact, that the New Haven Railroad had undertaken to "defy our Massachusetts law by means of a subterfuge."

BULLET ENDS LIFE OF FORTY THIEVES' CHIEF

"Scar" Reilly, Renowned as Footpad Leader and Hero of Water Front, Killed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—"Scar" Reilly of the "Forty Thieves," holdup men, footpads, thieves and [illegible], all round criminal and [illegible], was shot early today in "Tom" Cravens's East Side saloon.

Cravens admits he fired the shot which ended the career of one of the most remarkable crooks the New York police have ever had to deal with.

The "Forty Thieves" have long been the terror of the upper East Side. Their audacity made it unsafe for lone pedestrians to venture into their [illegible] after dark.

Tried to Rob Saloon

According to Cravens the gang has frequently held him up [illegible] to [illegible] him with [illegible]. About 1 o'clock this morning, he says, "Scar" and three of his followers came into the saloon and undertook to seize the contents of the cash drawer.

All were armed, but the saloonkeeper, snatching his revolver from behind the bar, managed to fire the first shot. Reilly fell and Cravens kept on shooting. "Scar's" followers fled.

Cravens examined [illegible] and found him dead. Then he says he lost his head. Instead of notifying the police, he carried the corpse to a hallway [illegible] and left it there in a pool of blood.

A man who stumbled over it [illegible] notified the police. The police found persons who had heard the shooting in the saloon, sought Cravens at his home and took him to the station. There he told his story, and is held pending an investigation of the case.

Renowned as Life Saver

Reilly was [illegible] of the [illegible]. He was once [illegible] in the old Humpty Jackson gang on the lower East Side. When the police broke it up he went up town and became leader of the "Forty Thieves."

In spite of the crimes of violence and assaults he committed and the murders of which he was suspected, "Scar" was also noted as a life saver. The water front knew him as a hero for the daring with which he plunged into the water to rescue drowning men, women and children. It is said he has saved dozens by his skill and strength as a swimmer and his utter indifference to danger.

From head to foot he was marked by knife thrusts and bullet wounds. Hence the title of "Scar."

LUCE ACCEPTS CALL TO ENTER POLITICAL FIGHT

PLEDGES JUSTICE TO ALL AS PLATFORM IN LIEUTENANT-GOVERNORSHIP FIGHT.

Accepting a call from Republicans of his home city for the use of his name as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, Representative Robert Luce of Somerville, for nine years a member of the House of Representatives, today announced his political creed.

"The voters," says Mr. Luce, "rightly demand that a candidate shall stand for something besides himself. Therefore in the past I have appealed to them chiefly on the ground of what I believe, as shown by the principles for which I have fought in other years."

Luce's Political Creed.

Strict economy in the use of the public revenue for public [illegible].

Liberal expenditure for the care of the afflicted, the prevention of disease and the preservation of the public health.

Direct inheritance taxes.

Impartial apportionment of the public revenue from corporation excises.

Maintenance of the anti-stock watering laws.

Prevention of the merging of steam and street railways, to the end that transportation by electric power may have full development.

Encouragement of [illegible] in [illegible] and industrial [illegible].

Appointment to office on the basis of merit only.

[illegible] of the [illegible].

Proper observance of the Sabbath, one day of rest in seven.

"Repression of machine influence in politics to the limits of legitimate leadership.

Adequate restraint on the use of money in political campaigns.

[illegible] and [illegible] on the nominating and on the election day.

Fair play and an equal chance to all by direct nominations for public office.

Representative government precisely as set forth in the Bill of Rights in the Constitution and practised by the fathers for two hundred years.

Pledges Himself to Justice

The Somerville call on Luce was signed by the presidents of five out of the six Republican ward clubs and by President William H. Smith of the President Roosevelt Club of Ward 2. The ward club presidents are Benjamin J. Freeman, William M. Irving, Joseph Hillson, James S. Newcomb and John M. Woods, of Wards 1, 3, 4, 5 and 6 respectively. Their letter is extremely laudatory.

"A man's severest critics," Mr. Luce says, "are those of his own home, his neighbors, and when they attest confidence by asking him to assume such high responsibilities as these he may, indeed, be proud.

"It has been my belief that in trying to keep in advance of legislation along these lines I have represented the desires of the mass of the voters of my district and, indeed, of the whole Commonwealth. Our progress is the instinct of the people, and they have no sympathy for the ultra-conservatism that means simply stagnation. If they should deem a vote for me to be approval of progressive endeavor it would at any rate encourage others who now demand that Massachusetts shall not stand still.

"More important than progress, however, is justice. You have the right to the pledge that, if I am elected to high executive office, my first concern shall always be fair play and a square deal for high and low, rich and poor, capital and labor, corporation and public. This pledge I make."

Was Newspaper Editor

Seen today by a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN, Representative Luce said that he had nothing to add at this time to the correspondence which had passed between himself and the presidents of the Somerville Ward clubs.

"Let the other fellows have a chance," he said.

The other aspirants are John N. Cole of Andover, speaker of the House; Louis A. Frothingham of the Back Bay, former speaker of the House, and Arthur B. Chapin of Holyoke, State treasurer and receiver general.

Cole, like Luce, will be an anti-machine candidate. Whether the organization will eventually turn towards Frothingham or Chapin is now the subject of some speculation.

Luce, who is [illegible] years old, is a native of Auburn, Me. He was graduated from Harvard in 1882, served as newspaper desk editor, got out a book or two on "Writing for the Press," and organized the Press Clipping Bureau. Mr. Luce is called the "father of direct nominations in Massachusetts."

Keep the Demon of Doubt Out of Your Heart; Have Faith

By Beatrice Fairfax

In love, if love be love, if love be ours,
Faith and unfaith can ne'er be equal powers.
Tennyson.

ISN'T it strange that, no matter how well we women love, we are always ready to let the demon Doubt creep into our breast and poison our happiness?

Let a man's manner be the least bit preoccupied, let his greeting be the tiniest degree less warm than usual, and the woman who loves is convinced that his love is growing cold.

Woman must learn to have faith in man's love. She must not expect him to be continually at the maximum point in devotion.

There are hours when he is tired, or depressed, or absorbed in business cares. He does not love her any the less. His mind is distracted by cares or failures; that is all.

It is small honor to the man you love to be willing to doubt him on the slightest occasion.

Give Him the Benefit

Love breeds fears, I know; but why not always let the benefit of the doubt rest with the loved one?

Don't imagine he is untrue to you every time he looks at a pretty woman.

[illegible] a man must [illegible] to shut his eyes to the admirable qualities of all other women?

And if he forgets to kiss you good-by some morning, don't spend the day in miserable doubts as to whether his love is dead.

There are times with every one of us when even the person we love best gets a little bit on our nerves.

Make Allowances

[illegible]

To love and [illegible] That is misery [illegible], and for that reason I urge you to [illegible] as long as [illegible] is possible.

Keep the [illegible] and [illegible] out of your [illegible]. Take love as a [illegible], a beautiful, [illegible] thing [illegible] and the more [illegible].

[illegible], and yet we [illegible] it after we get it.

We [illegible] it, we make it common[illegible], and we [illegible].

[illegible] of life there [illegible] as those of a dead love.

Ten Commandments for the Business Man

FIRST—Thou shalt not in anywise boast, brag, bounce or bluster, or the wise men will hold thee in low esteem.

SECOND—Thou shalt not permit thy wife to be living at the rate of $1,000 a year when thy business is not yielding more than $999; nor shalt thou withhold from her the business information which, as a helpmeet, she is entitled to receive.

THIRD—Thou shalt not mock the unsuccessful man, for he may be richer in his poverty than thou are in thy boasted abundance.

FOURTH—Thou shalt not carry the counting-house into the domestic circle, nor in anywise spoil the children's hour by recapitulating the bankruptcies of the day.

FIFTH—Thou shalt not hobnob with idle persons or smoke with them, nor encourage them, nor approve their evil life.

SIXTH—Thou shalt not keep company with an unpunctual man, for he will certainly lead thee to carelessness and ruin.

SEVENTH—Thou shalt not forget that a servant who tell lies for thee may one day tell lies to thee.

EIGHTH—As to hours of slumber and sleep, remember the good old rule:

Nature requires five,
Custom gives seven,
Laziness takes nine
And wickedness eleven.

NINTH—Neither a borrower nor a lender be, but give where well bestowed right cheerfully.

TENTH—Be honest in copper, and in gold thy honesty will be sure.

CROSS SADDLE COMING

ONE interesting scene at the London Horse Show will represent a hunting field, with the women riding astride. "Is the cross-saddle going to be the rule among women?" is a question often asked. Many persons known as the "riding set" think the custom is making its way among English and American women. Opinions as to the advisability of women riding astride differ greatly among women's tailors. Certain ones assert that the constant use of a side-saddle spoils a woman's figure.

CREAMED FISH

TAKE any kind of cold fish, free it of bones and chop fine. Make a sauce of flour and butter, rubbed to a cream, heat a little milk, then add the egg, season with celery salt and pepper, cover with bread or cracker crumbs, put small pieces of butter on top and brown in hot oven. This is nice for a light supper.

TOMATO SOUP

One quart milk, a heaping tablespoonful of cornstarch, two tablespoons of butter, rubbed into a cream with the cornstarch. Put the milk on in a double boiler, and then add a little of the milk to the cornstarch and butter. Let all scald in the boiler. Heat a can of tomatoes to the boiling point; strain the tomatoes and just before adding to the milk add a pinch of soda. Season with salt and pepper and serve hot.
MRS. E. DOWTY,
No. 63 North Ash street, New Bedford.

BOILED ROAST PORK

FIRST get a nice piece of pork and wash thoroughly, place in large kettle and boil about two hours. Take from kettle and place in roasting pan. Have dressing ready and place in pan around the meat, and then season the meat, and that will also season the dressing about right. Put a little hot water in pan to keep meat from burning, and then roast for three-quarters of an hour in a good hot oven. Do not throw away water that the meat was boiled in, but boil potatoes in it to serve with meat. Season the water with salt and pepper if you like it. We like it this way.
MRS. A. KENYON,
No. 31 C street, Lowell.

NUT PUDDING

PREPARE a rich custard from one pint of milk, two eggs, one heaping spoonful of sugar. When cold add one pint of whipped cream, and a small cupful of preserved ginger syrup. Now pour into the freezer and when half frozen stir into the mixture three tablespoons of chopped walnuts, and a cupful of thinly sliced ginger. Freeze hard and serve in sherbet glasses.

PRESERVED PEARS

TO every pint of boiling water add one pound of granulated sugar. Add the pears, cook till they become transparent or till they can be pierced with a straw. Fill jars with boiling mixture, seal, and as the preserves cool tighten the covers. Use new rubber rings. Will keep indefinitely.

JUST THE BETTY FOR BILLY TO MARRY

As Told by the Stars and Nell Brinkley

THE BILLY OF VIOLET DREAMS AND THE BETTY OF SCARLET

THIS is the Blessed Billy of Violet, and he dreams dreams all the days. And the dreams he dreams are like the wine-like light that comes through the stained windows of a church and touches the faces and the marble of the floor with romance.

This Billy makes a little of the crinkley green and twinkling gold enough to buy cabins, and the things that are comfy to sit in and fine to look upon, and teetering stacks of soft-bound books with the glint of gilding upon their backs and the thin edges of their ivory leaves.

And these things, with the blue sky and the singing birds and the sun, are enough for the Billy of dreams.

Chests of gold coins that he might look upon are vastly nothing to this Billy, [illegible] of the Lotus Flower that tells a tale between green backs on the shelf above his [illegible].

And Power! Betty Angelface, he dips his long fingers in that and goes a-dreaming.

Lady folk are wonderful to him all the days he lives, but he is a One-woman Man, and it would be very fine and wonderful to be the One Lady of this Blessed Billy.

He is all content. He lifts his face to the sky and smiles always, and his heart seems to hold the sky's quiet and dreaming, and its wise silence and utter peace.

He never tears him along on nervous, worried legs, with his brows scrunched up and his mouth tight. He only smiles and walks in all serenity.

This Billy's books glint down at him with their rows after rows of gilded backs from all four walls of his place where he blows the thin blue rings above his head and dreams and works. And his hands love the feel of the soft backs of them, and the flutter of the leaves, and the tales they tell. Fairy stories and the romance of knighthood, and the old days and mighty deeds delight his heart as though he might still be a child.

And he grows old with his face still turning often to the sky, and still a dreamer and still content.

And the stars tell that for this Billy of Violet and Dreams is the Betty of Scarlet. She is mated to the sun. She is a poppy [illegible] in the wind like the moonline.

She can't walk like any real Lady Betty should walk. She skips and hops on one foot and then the other. She runs, when there is some one thing she must have! and quick!

She is all bright motion, and she tips up her chin and shakes her head when she laughs.

She pouts when the sun goes gray under a cloud, and when it comes all pale gold again she beats her palms one against the other and sings, "Oh ho! I am the very happiest one in all the world!"

She is changeable as the wind and the sea. She loves all life, in no content and peace, but wildly, with singing and tears and laughter.

She would love all the books of Billy because he liked them so; but for her own self. Oh ho! Only the ones whose tales pleased her. The others she would pull up her soft shoulders to her ears at!

She would tease this Billy into tempers and then laugh at him. She would excite and chatter him into sometimes hurrying with his serene feet. She would lure him away from his dreaming and his ivory-leaved books so that he would learn to laugh with all the Billys and the Bettys that this Scarlet Betty of his of the gay heart would beguile around her.

And if he would not come she would [illegible], perhaps, with curls and kisses and [illegible] hands; and some other times she would call him a beast and grab his book away from him and jam it in its place, with a shake of her fist at it, and bustle him away to the shore to laugh and do the thing she wanted him to do.

For the Billy of Dreams and Violet there is the Betty of Scarlet, the changeable Betty of the wind and the sea, for she would save him from dreaming himself into a grub, and perhaps she would teach him to laugh and catch a car, sometimes.

NELL BRINKLEY.

An Old Maid's Own Confessions of Her Leap Year Troubles

By Arletta B. Canfield

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner.

SAY, did I pull out the tremolo stop when Fuzzy Wuzzy got past me? Not so as anybody could hear it. You can't crush Bill unless you drop a ton of rock on her.

I couldn't pry Abie loose from his pocketbook and that was all the use your orator had for him.

Ah, me! I wonder if the men have such experiences when they are hunting wives? If they do I don't wonder that so many of them trot in single harness to the end.

Am I discouraged? Not a little bit. Bill is right here with bells on. Just keep your eye on her.

Well, I met the nicest man—that's what I thought. I was downtown shopping and met George Williams, the husband of my dearest chum. With him was a man of about forty with the most thoroughly respectable visage you could imagine. I thought to myself, "Bill, here's a chance for another torchlight procession—if the man doesn't squelch the torches."

I accepted an invitation to luncheon with them and Bud did the host act. What did he order? Well, just the best eatings in the food conservatory.

He said he didn't see any use of mo[illegible] any near food when he had such a pile of blue chips in his pockets. I said that I didn't see what he wanted with anything like that in his pocket, but if his mother had sent him out to pick up some ones I guessed she knew what she wanted.

Behind Closed Doors

HE threw back his head and the laugh that gurgled out told Bill that she had scored. I resolved that this game would be played behind closed doors with Cupid as a lookout. Nobody should block my game this time.

George excused himself soon and asked me to help entertain Bud while he was in town. Didn't I tell you who he was? Well, I will now. Bud Foster hailed from New York, a gentleman of leisure and a college mate of George's.

I finished my shopping and dined with Budsie. Wasn't I the limit, did you say? Well, wasn't he spending his own money? I intended to make a whirlwind wooing of this one. I wouldn't run the risk of anybody putting a pin in my wheel.

I'd been played for a sucker so much that my brains were cutting up all sorts of high jinks up in my loft. So I just flung all such foolishness as the prophecies into the ash can, shut my eyes and shoved in my whole stack.

Yes, I went to the theatre with him and to supper afterward. At the beginning of the supper, in order to insure good service, Bud tipped the waiter, who was of chocolate hue, with a big, bright, healthy cartwheel. He remarked: "Sambo, this will stake you to a go at the bones."

Lost Consciousness

HE said that he had heard of a game which was vulgarly called craps and you played it by shooting the bones. That if you threw naturals the first time you win and if you throw craps you lose. He said, "If you roll out little Joe, fever dice, Widow Hicks or Big Dick, that is your point. Then you have to——"

Right there I lost consciousness, and when I revived he was still talking. I caught something that sounded like "Come seven, come eleven," but I had let the linchpin out of my wagon, and the hind wheels failed to connect.

I felt sure that he had kinks in his think material, but what did I care? I would be on hand to untie all the bow knots he wanted to arrange there after I became Mrs. Bud.

I asked him if he had ever heard of a game called poker. He said that he had played it once or twice. I'd heard Bert tell about the games he used to play at college, and I supposed these were the ones he referred to. Of course I asked him all about it. He told me.

Honest, when he got through talking about bullets and ladies and gentlemen and travelling thirty miles I was batty. It sounded like a blood and thunder novel to me. When he told me that if I held a pair of deuces and failed to help in the draw I had better throw my hand into the discard, I promised him faithfully that I would, even if I had to amputate it to do so.

Fond of Cats

OH, yes, another attractive thing about Bud was that he liked cats. I know he did, for he spoke so lovingly of a "kitty" when he was reminiscing. I'm so glad, for I won't have to part with Polly Primrose.

So thought Bill. Well, we caught the owl car home, and as the time drew near for us to part Bud began to look like a lonesome turtle dove on a bleak limb in the middle of winter. I cinched in and told him that a bachelor's life must be awfully lonely for a sociable man like him.

He said, "Well, to tell the truth I have been going it alone because I didn't like to ask a woman to tie up with a man who likes the pasteboards as well as I do."

I said that I had always heard that men who gambled made the kindest of husbands, and that I wouldn't be afraid to risk it if—

"By Jove," he said, "you're just the wife for me. Come with me to-morrow. We'll have the parson make his little spiel in the morning and wipe our feet on my front door mat in the evening."

Me marry a gambler? Why not? It's the fashion to do your neighbor nowadays and why not that way as well as any other? His money would buy just as many frou frous as if it were squeezed out of the poor man's pockets by the milk trust.

Well, if there's a brace game going, trust Bill to run up against it. Talk about a come-on from Pumpkinville. If you ever see one moseying along the street looking like an easy mark, say "Hello, Bill," to it. You can't miss it.

Bud went down to his pet joint and dropped his wad in order to celebrate. At least that's what he said.

He handed me the sad news in the morning. Oh, the morning after! He wanted me to stick. Said he'd get another stake and he'd soon be to the good again. What do you think of that? I made a noise just as much like an oyster as I could and bowed little casino out.

N. B. A special delivery just arrived tells me that the loss of Bud's wad was a bum steer. Words fail me. I——

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

HAS GOITRE

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Will you please tell me how to get rid of a goitre or thick neck?
A. B. L.

A GOITRE is a case of your physician or a throat specialist. It is the enlargement of one of the glands caused by some clogging of the circulation and needs special treatment. You should be careful not to bruise or otherwise injure it by external treatments. Electricity is always good for clogged circulation in any form, but should be given under the direction of a physician.

PEROXIDE AND AMMONIA

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Will you please tell me how to use peroxide of hydrogen and ammonia as a bleach for superfluous hair? Which should be applied first?
V. Y.

USE the peroxide at night and the ammonia in the morning, or vice versa. It makes no difference.

RED AND FLESHY NOSE

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Will you please tell me of something to cure a red nose and a fleshy nose, and the cause of it?
WORRIED YOUNG MAN.

THE red nose may be caused by indigestion, nervous trouble or dissipation. Look to the cause first and remove it. In the meantime bathe the nose with the following lotion: To one ounce of glycerin add one-half dram of muriate of ammonia and one-quarter dram of tannic acid. After these are dissolved add one and one-half ounces of rosewater. Wet a piece of cotton in this lotion and bind on the nose over night, and bathe the nose with it frequently during the day. This will take at least six weeks to show any effect, but if you persevere it will come in time.

AMERICAN DAILY SHORT STORY

A Lover's Dilemma

By Charles Wellner

"I THINK, captain, you better go and speak to the cook yourself if you don't want everything on board the vessel to go to the devil."

The old captain, who was sitting writing at his desk, looked up.

"I sent the cook to buy vegetables and potatoes and he came back with the empty basket and threw it on the floor furious, and now he has locked himself up in his cabin and is on a strike."

"Call him in here," the captain shouted.

"Cook!" the first mate shouted out into the galley, "go into the captain's cabin immediately."

No answer.

The mate called once more, but the cook did not reply.

Now Martens went down to the door and cried: "You better not make too much fuss, Fritz. The old man is furious, and besides we have no potatoes and no vegetables for dinner."

"Then you can go over to Hanne Mueller and get them yourself," the answer came.

"What does that mean?" Martens asked in surprise. "Open the door, Fritz, or something will happen to you. I tell you I will give you a cigarette, a cigarette with a gold tip if you will just open——"

Immediately the door opened and a young fellow came out. His own eye was swollen and blackened evidently from the blow of a fist.

"Who hit you?" Martens asked.

"Hanne did," the young fellow said with a blush. "Where is my cigarette now?"

"Hanne! Do you mean to say that Hanne gave you that black eye? Impossible!" And he handed Fritz the cigarette he had promised him. "Why did she do it?"

Saw Stars

"When I came into the store there was a whole crowd of people there who were all talking at once, and as soon as Hanne got sight of me she made a rush for me and hit me right in the eye until I saw stars all over."

"But you must have done something to offend her."

"Nothing, nothing is what I have done to her. She just went for me as soon as I came inside."

"If I were in your place I would go back and ask her why she did it," the mate said.

"You would, just so that she would blacken the other eye, too. No, not I." And he sought consolation in smoking his cigarette.

"What is going on here?" came the voice of the captain from below.

The mate told him what he had heard and the cook showed his disfigured face. [illegible] of the crew also came and [illegible].

"[illegible] anything I ever heard," [illegible]. "Surely Hanne wouldn't do such a thing without a reason. You must have insulted her. I suppose you have been [illegible] after her on the street."

The young fellow made a very peculiar face and scratched himself behind the ear.

"No, I never done anything to her," he [illegible].

"Well, something must have happened to make her act like that," the old man said, turning to the ship's carpenter.

"I suppose she must have been jealous," the carpenter suggested.

"Jealous," the mate exclaimed. "Why, the cook is nothing but a boy."

"I was not thinking of the cook," the old man [illegible].

"What the devil are you talking about?" the captain [illegible], losing his patience.

"Oh, Martens can probably tell you. He's always been in love with her."

The mate blushed to the roots of his hair.

"I in love with her!" he stammered and blushed again. "That beats anything. I have been pleasant to her when I have ordered vegetables and potatoes, but I have never said anything to her and she can't possibly be jealous, and I don't believe she——"

"But [illegible] do," the ship's carpenter growled.

"It's a pity that the poor child has to suffer for what other people have done. Why don't you go with him yourself and order the things needed?"

In Confusion

The mate didn't know what to say. He was terribly embarrassed and at the same time felt that he hadn't done anything wrong. It was true when he said that he had merely been polite and pleasant when he bought vegetables for the vessel, but that was all.

Of course he couldn't deny that he thought a good deal of Hanne, but Hanne was well off. Her mother owned not only a good business, but also several houses, and Hanne was her only child. Martens had never had courage enough to think of getting this rich girl for his wife, but the thought that she might be jealous on his account sent the blood running through his veins and made him speechless.

"Martens, you ought to be ashamed of yourself," the captain growled. "Such a nice girl——"

"But it is not true. She doesn't think of me at all, though I wish she would."

The old captain stood a while scratching his head, but at last he said: "Put on your Sunday clothes, Martens, and come along with me to Frau Mueller. I'm going to find out what is at the bottom of all this."

The mate went down below and shortly afterwards reappeared dressed in a new blue suit. Then the two went away to [illegible].

In front of the store a crowd of people were standing [illegible] discussing something [illegible]. As soon as they had gone inside they were questioned from all sides, but Hanne, a tall and exceedingly pretty girl, told them to keep quiet.

"I can attend to my own business myself," she cried.

"Hanne, what does this mean?" the captain began. "You know that I am your friend, as I was your father's friend."

"Oh, friend here and friend there," the young girl cried. "I'm going to make a complaint about you and your mate. To insult me like that! It's scandalous!"

"Insult you? What has happened?"

"Who put the notice in the paper that Hanne Mueller and Hanz Martens were engaged?"

The mate turned pale as a ghost, and the captain's eyes were not good to look upon.

"Impossible!"

"Impossible!" Martens stammered. "Impossible!"

"Yes, impossible! But I have seen it with my own eyes, and so have many others. It's scandalous; my reputation is ruined."

Turning to his mate, the captain said sternly: "Did you have anything to do with that?"

"I swear that I have not the least suspicion who did it."

"Well, I know you well enough to know that you wouldn't lie," the captain said. "You must have some enemy, Hanne, who has played a practical joke on you."

After a while Hanne calmed down, and the kind words of her father's old friend made even her mother look at the affair quite calmly. All four went into the back room and began to talk it over.

"I gave you my word," Martens said, looking straight into Hanne's eye, "that I had nothing to do with this thing. I have never dared to think such a thing possible——"

"Well," Frau Mueller said, "my daughter was furious because everybody came here to congratulate her, and now we haven't the least suspicion who put the notice in the paper, but I should like to get hold of that fellow."

"After all, it may be possible to find it out."

"Of course it must be found out, and who knows what it will cost," Hanne cried; "but first of all we must immediately put another notice in the paper saying that there is no engagement."

Then Martens looked at the young girl in such a strange way that she blushed. The old captain noticed this, and a lucky idea struck him. He loved Martens as if he were his own son, and he was no less fond of Hanne, the daughter of his oldest friend. It would have been joy to him to see the two married.

"Children," he said, "some mischievous person has played this joke, and how would it be now if you would take revenge upon him by making it true and marrying each other? You are nice young people, and I'm sure would just suit each other."

"Hanne," Martens whispered, and took her hand, "but for this I would never have dared to propose to you, but as it is, what do you say. Should we make the announcement true? I have loved you for a long time——"

"It would suit me," Frau Mueller said.

"And me, too," the old captain added.

"Say yes, Hanne," the young mate said, kissing her hand.

Hanne blushed and looked down.

"Well, when it suits all of you I suppose there is nothing else for me to do."

A few weeks later the wedding took place. Who put the announcement in the paper no one has ever found out, but to tell the truth none of the two ever tried hard to discover the rascal. They considered this announcement as the hand of fate.

Simple Remedies for Chapped Lips

CONSTANT vigilance is necessary to overcome the annoyance and painfulness of chapped lips. For slight cases a soothing lotion is usually sufficient, but when chapping, as it often does, degenerates into cracks or bleeding radical remedies must be applied.

A simple lotion that can be rubbed on every night is made from an ounce each of rosewater, glycerin and a half dram of borax, thoroughly mixed and kept closely bottled.

For cracks and severe chapping nothing is better than camphorated cold cream, applied each night before retiring and well rubbed in.

THE BALL WATCH

HERE'S a cunning novelty.

The princess and empire gown brought it out.

It's a tiny timepiece set into a small gold ball.

The ball is no larger than a pecan nut, and brilliantly jeweled.

It is worn about the neck on a short chain jeweled to match the watch.

It makes a very charming ornament, and can be worn when the ordinary practical timepiece could not.

WIFE WEEPS AS SHE GETS SEPARATION

"I Wanted Him to Love Me," Says Girlish Matron, Testifying About Desertion.

HER SUIT UNCONTESTED

With her beautiful girlish face hidden in her great black lynx muff, Mrs. Myrtle A. Cram, a Newton society young woman, wept bitterly when she heard Judge McIntyre, sitting in the Probate Court at East Cambridge today, grant her a decree of separate maintenance from her husband, Benjamin H. Cram, a Congress street broker and wellknown club man.

The girlish wife charged desertion and the case was uncontested. For fully an hour she related the love she had for her husband and the coldness and indifference with which it was received, and at the conclusion said: "I love my husband, and would go and live with him tomorrow if he wanted me.

"I have long realized that I was never strong enough to ask him why he was so indifferent. Each time that I started to talk I realized how weak I was and began to cry."

Made Dainty Witness.

Attired in a tight-fitting tailor-made suit of brown, a bearskin jacket and a large brown picture hat, Mrs. Cram, who is of average height, looked not unlike a French doll as she stood on the witness stand and laid bare her heart's secret to Judge McIntyre.

"About a year after our marriage in 1901," said Mrs. Gram, "I began to note my husband's indifference. He is greatly interested in mining stocks and was frequently making long trips to the West. I didn't see him for months at a time. Often I would hear from friends that he had come back to Boston, but he never came near me.

"Every day without fail I wrote to him while he was away, and when I didn't receive any answers to my letters I sent telegrams asking him why he didn't answer my letters. Very often I sent him boxes of candy and fruit. With my camera I snapped our pet dog and sent him the pictures, thinking that it would please him, but I was unable to break his silence.

Cries as She Wins

"Once while I was visiting his mother at Rockport, he came down, but he paid little or no attention to me. Once I visited him at his office, after he had been away a long time. He treated him very coldly. He didn't even touch me and I wanted him to love me so much."

The court ordered the husband to pay his wife $100 forthwith and $83.30 upon the first of each month.

When Judge McIntyre announced that he had decided in her favor, Mrs. Gram held her muff to her face and wept bitterly. A court officer led her to a retiring room.

Do You Deliberately Torture Yourself Alive By Neglecting Your Stomach?

Remedy Free For the Asking

A great outcry has arisen during the last few years against scientists who torture dumb animals alive in the interests of science. How many people are there, however, who needlessly torture themselves by causing their stomachs to overwork? Dyspepsia, indigestion, heartburn, sleeplessness, loss of vim and energy are the inevitable result.

Are you one of these?

Why not give your stomach a rest? Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will relieve your stomach of all its work and do it for you. They are compounded of the very elements and do the work which the stomach performs when in normal health, aseptic pepsin, malt diastase and like ingredients.

Dr. Richardson, in writing a thesis on treatment of dyspepsia and indigestion, closes his remarks by saying, "For those suffering from acid dyspepsia, shown by sour, watery risings, or for flatulent dyspepsia shown by gas on stomach, causing heart trouble and difficult breathing, as well as for all other forms of stomach trouble, the safest treatment is to take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal. I advise them because they contain no harmful drugs, but are composed of valuable digestives, which act promptly upon the food eaten. I never knew a case of indigestion or even chronic dyspepsia which Stuart's Tablets would not reach."

Cheap cathartic medicines claiming to cure dyspepsia and indigestion can have no effect whatever in actively digesting the food, and to call any cathartic medicine a cure for indigestion is a misnomer.

Every druggist in the United States and Canada sells Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and they are not only the safest and most successful, but the most scientific of any treatment for indigestion and stomach troubles.

Price 50c a box at all druggists.

VET SLAYS COMRADE TO AVENGE 'SLAP ON NOSE'

QUARREL LEADS TO SHOOTING OF BENEFACTOR BY AGED WARRIOR.

Special to the Boston American.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 28.—Clark W. Lillibridge, proprietor of the Armory Hill market and a veteran of the Civil War, was shot and instantly killed at his barn on Middle street today by Anton Neiman, also a veteran. Neiman has been held without bail on the charge of murder for a hearing March 6.

So far as the police have been able to ascertain there was a quarrel between the two men, in the course of which Neiman was slapped on the nose. Mr. Lillibridge was backing a wagon from the barn when he was shot. He dropped dead between the shafts, the bullet having passed through his heart.

Acted Strangely

"He struck me on the nose and I had to kill him," was the way Neiman explained the murder to Police Sergeant Hall when he was arrested.

Nearly two years ago Mr. Lillibridge took Neiman into his employ. Neiman is an old soldier and had served with his benefactor. He was at first given a place in the house, but, according to the murdered man's wife, the old fellow acted so strangely that Mr. Lillibridge, at his wife's suggestion, fitted up a room for him in the shed adjoining the barn. In return for the lodgings he was to do odd jobs about the Lillibridge household.

There had been a grievance between the two men for the last week and a half, but what it was about no one has been able to ascertain.

"He had no reason to quarrel with my husband, who had befriended him," Mrs. Lillibridge said today.

The marketman went to the barn at the usual hour of six o'clock to prepare for the day's business. The barn is a short distance from his home at the corner of Main and Marble streets.

Two Shots Fired

Fred E. Garrison of No. 25 Marble street heard the sound of two shots, and looking out of his window saw Neiman running into the shed with a revolver in his hand.

Garrison rushed out, and met Neiman. "Go and get the police," Garrison says the old soldier told him. "I've killed him." The police were sent for.

When the officers arrived, Neiman was flourishing the revolver, but he was overpowered. Of the five shots which the weapon held two had been fired. Only one struck Mr. Lillibridge, but that with such deadly aim that the marketman staggered only a step or two before he fell.

The dead man was sixty-three years of age and was well known in the city. His daughter, Miss Grace Lillibridge, is a teacher in the Central High School.

Wife Afraid of Him.

Neiman is sixty-nine years old. He is of German descent. He has been living in Springfield for a number of years, but not much is known about him. He is not known to have any relatives.

"Mr. Neiman claimed to be an old soldier, and Mr. Lillibridge befriended him on that account," Mrs. Lillibridge said after the shooting. "For a long time he had a room in the house, but he got to acting so strangely that I told my husband I was afraid of him. That was about a year ago. Soon after that a room was fitted up for him in the barn.

"In return for this he was supposed to care for the furnace, mow the lawn and keep the sidewalks clear from snow. My husband never had a quarrel with him. He had no reason to quarrel."

MAYOR FINDS CITY STABLE IS ILL-KEPT

As a result of a visit paid by Mayor Hibbard to the South Boston stable of the street cleaning and watering department at H and Second streets today, Foreman Bartholomew Haley of the South Boston district is due for a session on the "carpet." The Mayor, who was accompanied by Alderman W. Prentiss Parker and Assistant Secretary Bondrot, found a "wharf man," Michael J. Hurley, in charge of the stable, Haley being absent from the yard.

The stable, the Mayor said, was filthy and apparently uncared for. In the loft a pigeon and hen coop combined was discovered. A standpipe which was broken a year ago had not been fixed, and there being no available water the wagons and equipment at the yard had not been washed for a year. The Mayor called Acting Superintendent of Street Cleaning C. D. A. Hourin on the 'phone and ordered him to have Foreman Haley report at once to the Mayor's office.

CAPTURED IN HOT CHASE

In custody of Officer Delesky of the LaGrange street station, Henry J. Davis, seventeen, giving his residence as No. 128 D street, South Boston, was taken to police headquarters today and his photograph taken for the rogues' gallery. Davis is charged with having stolen about twenty-one skirts, two bundles of cloth and two clocks from the Princess Skirt Company and the Boston Manufacturing Company, who occupy the third and fourth floors of a building at No. 725 Washington street.

It is claimed by the police that between 8:30 and 9 o'clock last evening Davis, with a companion, climbed up the fire escape of the building and entered. Officer Delesky met the pair and started to investigate. They ran down to Harrison avenue and then back to Washington street, Davis being captured on Hollis street. His companion escaped.

NEW SCANDALS TO BE BARED IN PATENT OFFICE

Declare Evidence Establishes Conspiracy and Destruction of Records.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Startling disclosures are expected to follow the indictment of Ned W. Barton, an assistant examiner in the United States patent office, Henry W. Everding, a Philadelphia patent attorney, and John A. Heany, an inventor of York, Pa., by the grand jury of the District of Columbia. Secret service men are appealing [illegible] today in connection with the charges of forgery and substitution of patent records, which, it is said, have been unearthed.

Evidence presented to the grand jury in the cases of Barton, Everding and Heany is alleged to have proved the existence of a conspiracy, and examination to involve other employes to have disclosed a wilful destruction and substitution of [illegible] records.

Patents Worth $5,000,000.

It is charged that Barton, as assistant examiner in the division of [illegible], would take note of the [illegible] submitted by other persons for patents [illegible] on Heany's devices, then [illegible] Heany, who would [illegible] applications and have them antedated.

The real inventors of the improvements would then be [illegible] in Barton that their improvements were covered in previous applications by Heany.

Heany's patents are estimated to have been worth at least $5,000,000.

Penalty Imprisonment

The penalty for the destruction of public records is imprisonment for not more than three years. Secretary Garfield will likely file suit in the federal courts to annul the patents granted Heany.

VIOLET RAY EXPERIMENTS MAY COST EDISON HIS LIFE

INVENTOR ATTRIBUTES SERIOUS CONDITION TO HIS SCIENTIFIC RESEARCHES.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—That Thomas A. Edison's dangerous condition, resulting from two serious operations for mastoid trouble and for deafness, which have steadily increased during the past few years, have been brought on by his experiments with the violet rays of the solar spectrum is the theory of the great inventor himself, and is not denied by his physicians. Mr. Edison admits that the violet rays destroy the white corpuscles of the blood, which, scientists recognize, are the means by which the human body combats disease and fights off germ attacks.

Mr. Edison's condition is regarded as far from favorable today, although he passed a comfortable night, and is not in great pain.

The following bulletin regarding Mr. Edison's condition was posted at the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital at 9:30 o'clock today:

"Mr. Edison passed a comfortable night and his condition is distinctly favorable this morning. His temperature and pulse are normal."

Members of Mr. Edison's family are still at his bedside.

Yesterday's Operation Serious.

Yesterday's operation, involving the cutting through of the mastoid process, was far more serious than that of Sunday, which was merely for relief of an abscess of the left middle ear.

It is admittedly a good indication of Inventor Edison's general health that there should have been a renewal of the affection of the organ, with at the same told cells following what is supposed to have been a completely successful operation for [illegible] three years ago.

Despite the fact that the patient recovered satisfactorily from the operation, his weakness is also a source of fear, as is the fact that his health has been sorely broken by years of overwork and more or less reckless experimenting.

If he makes a satisfactory recovery from his present illness an attempt will be made to remove the peculiar lumps which have appeared on his chest and stomach and which none of his medical advisers has yet been able to cure or even to diagnose. Edison thinks these also were caused by destruction of the white blood corpuscles by the violet rays.

Will Try to Cure Eye

Though skilled opticians have repeatedly endeavored to restore the normal focus of his eyes, fresh attempts will be made in the light of studies the specialists have been making of his case at the hospital. His deafness, which is of many years' standing, is believed, however, to be beyond cure.

In spite of the fact that experiments with the violet rays so seriously affected two of his assistants that one of them lost two fingers and another his entire arm some time ago, Edison refused to give up his work, and will not promise his family even now that he will abandon it if he recovers, although he realizes that his life may be the forfeit of his zeal for science.

CLUB OPENS ITS NEW HOME

For two hours tonight, from 5:30 till 7:30, the members of the Boston Press Club will regale themselves in their home by that famous old Boston dish—baked beans. The bean supper will provide [illegible] "Catch-Can" entertainment at the new and luxurious rooms of the organization at No. 3 Beacon street, the event serving as a house warming.

The entertainment marks the formal opening of the new quarters of the Press Club, which during the past months has added nearly 200 new members and greatly strengthened its position among Boston social organizations.

We've kept busy sawing wood and saying little this month, but it may interest you to know that this will be the best February we've had in all our history of 56 years.

We've sold more clothes, better clothes, waited on more customers, made more new friends.

We've presented offerings of an unusual character. Our markdowns, always known for their generous proportions, have been larger than ever.

And so, we've done business to the extent of breaking all previous records.

Our object in telling you all this is not merely to exalt our personal pride, though we are pleased, of course.

Our purpose is deeper than that.

We want to fill every merchant, every individual who reads these words, with the same feeling of confidence that we possess—confidence in the outlook for a prosperous Spring business.

We believe that our record-breaking sales for January and February, 1908, justify us in anticipating an increased amount of sales for the coming season.

At any rate, we have prepared for it.

And we firmly believe we will get it.

WAS DELIRIOUS WITH ECZEMA

On Chest, Back, and Head—Pain, Heat, and Tingling Were Excruciating—Nerves in Exhausted Condition—Sleep Badly Broken.

CURE BY CUTICURA SEEMED LIKE MAGIC

"Words cannot express the gratitude I feel for what Cuticura Remedies have done for my daughter, Adelaide. She is fifteen years of age, and had never had anything the matter with her skin until four months ago, when an eruption broke out on her chest. The first symptom was a redness, and then followed thickening and blisters, which would break and run matter. I took her to a doctor, and he pronounced it to be eczema of a very bad form. He treated her, but instead of being checked, the disease spread. It showed itself on her back, and then quickly spread upwards until the whole of her head was affected, and all her hair had to be cut off. The pain she suffered was excruciating, and what with that and the heat and tingling her life was almost unbearable. She became run down in health, and at times was very feverish, languid, and drowsy, and occasionally she was delirious. Her nerves were in such a low state that she could not bear to be left alone. In spite of the cold weather she would insist on having her bedroom window open, and would lean out on the window-sill. She did not have a proper hour's sleep for many nights. The second doctor we tried afforded her just as little relief as the first, and I really do not know what we should have done if we had not read how Cuticura cured a similar case. I purchased Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Pills, and before the Ointment was three-quarters finished every trace of the disease was gone. It really seemed like magic. Her hair is coming on nicely, and I still apply the Cuticura Ointment as I find it increases the growth wonderfully. Mrs. T. W. Hyde, 1, Ongar Place, Brentwood, Essex, England, Mar. 8, 1907."

Cuticura Soap (25c.) to Cleanse the Skin, Cuticura Ointment (50c.) to Heal the Skin, and Cuticura Resolvent (50c.), or in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60, to Purify the Blood. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass.

A. H. C. Mitchell,
Boston American's Baseball Expert.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The Doves will not be seen at the South End grounds this year till April 22, when the Phillies will be their opponents. The regular National League season will open on April 14, and the Hub team will try to make good against the Dodgers in Brooklyn.

President Bryce of Columbus lost his appeal in the Harris case, and as a result the big pitcher will go West with the Red Sox. Bryce is so wrathy over the decision that he cancelled two exhibition games arranged with the Boston team.

Doves Sell Brown.

The Doves have sold Catcher Sam Brown to Toronto.

President Taylor and Treasurer McBreen left on the midnight train for Boston, while Manager McGuire will remain in New York and await their arrival at the Fifth Avenue Hotel on Monday morning.

The team will leave New York on Monday afternoon, and the party will include President Taylor, Manager McGuire, Harris, McConnell, Lord, Wagner, Carrigan and the newspaper men.

Unglaub will be picked up at Washington, while Gessler joins the outfit at Indianapolis.

About all the big organizations accomplished on the final day of the session was the ratification of several rules adopted by the joint rules committee. This latter band finally got busy at the end of the National League session, when the parent organization representatives went over from the Waldorf-Astoria to the Breslin and caught the Americans napping. The session did not last long, but there was plenty of action.

No more will the game be delayed while a pitcher rubs the gloss off a new sphere. In fact, it looks as if the glossed sphere will go the way of the cushion tired wheel.

On the proposal of William Murray of Philadelphia, the words "except the pitcher," after the word "player," in the third line of Rule 14, Section 4, were struck out. Hereafter when a new ball is thrown out by the umpire no one will be allowed to soil or roughen it except what little work the pitcher may affect with his glove as he gets into position for delivery.

Another rule proposed by Murray, which met with the favor of the committee was that pertaining to a caught fly ball, which permits a runner to score. The batter in such case hereafter will be credited with a sacrifice hit.

New Minor Rule.

The National Commission concluded its business by the amendment of Rules 34, 35 and 36. As these now read it is impossible for a minor league player who has advanced by purchase to the majors to be turned back to slower company unless all major league clubs waive claim. In case the waiver of a club cannot be secured the player becomes the property of the club so declining to waive for $1,500. Waivers cannot be asked on such players previous to February 1 of the year following the purchase.

The president of the major league asking waivers must immediately notify the president of the opposing league by wire to either waive or negotiate with the club of his organization desiring such player, the claim of any club in the same league seeking waiver to have precedence over that of any club in the opposition. Three days is the time limit set for the notification of refusal to waive, provision being made, of course, to exempt Sundays from the reckoning.

Sporting News Brietly Told

HARVARD FIVE MEETS YALE.

Unless some miracle happens the Harvard basketball team, which meets Yale to-night, at New Haven, will get an awful drubbing. When the Crimson played the Tigers they were about all in, but they are even worse now. Allin will play, but S. Browne is still out. Yale is in fine trim.

GOLD RACQUET ENTRIES.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Only three have entered the racquet championship games at the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club for the new gold racquet. F. F. Holland of Montreal will play the winner of the Douglas and Hewitt match.

WAGNER GETS DRAW.

LEWISTON, Me., Feb. 28.—Joe Wagner of New York and Napoleon Dufresne of Lewiston, fought six fast rounds to a draw before the Canadian Athletic Club in City Hall.

GRANT IN FINALS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Hackett and Alexander meet William R. Cragin, Jr., and M. S. Charlock to-day in finals of indoor tennis championship. Grant will play in the single finals to-morrow.

WALCOTTS ON THE DIAMOND.

Roger Walcott baseball team of Dorchester has organized. McLaughlin, the crack pitcher of last year, is captain. The team, with a few exceptions, will be the same as last year, which won the championship of the State. Games are wanted away from home with teams averaging seventeen years and offering good inducements.

GUNTHER GETS WALLOPING.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 28.—Jack Blackburn gave George Gunther his regular beating when they met at the Broadway A. C. In the last two rounds he had the Australian cut and bleeding. Gunther was forced to bang on and stall all through the round.

AMBY M'GARRY BEATEN.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Joe Sieger defeated Amby McGarry in the star bout at the Olympic A. C. The fight went the six rounds and at the finish McGarry was in bad shape. In the semi-windup Willie Mango knocked out Frankie Paul in the third round.

MADDEN GETS K. O. IN FOURTH.

SALEM, Feb. 28.—Johnnie Madden, U. S. N., knocked out Jim Sawyer in four rounds in a private bout. Joe Gordon, champion wrestler of the navy, won from Rosaldo in two straight falls.

WILL LEAD HARVARD SEVEN.

The Harvard hockey team has elected Joseph P. Willetts '09 of Skaneateles, N. Y., captain for next year. He has played point on Harvard teams for three years.

PENNSY GETS TITLE.

The University of Pennsylvania won the intercollegiate basketball championship by defeating Columbia Wednesday night.

HAWTHORNES OPEN APRIL 19

The baseball team that will represent the Hawthorne Club this year will be the strongest that has ever borne the name of the old organization. It will be ready about April 19 to take on any semi-professional team in the State. J. Paul Canty of Roxbury has been chosen manager and he has hopes of building up a schedule that will prove his worth to the club. The team will be captained by Jack Emery while the twirling will be done by the former schoolboy phenoms, Jack Finley and Charlie Miller.

YOUNG GRIM AFTER BOUTS.

Young Joe Grim of Providence wants to box any 122-pound boy in New England. Mike Brady or Young Ross preferred. Grim has won twenty-three fights in less than two years.

Notes of the Harness Horses

Bill Robbs of Allston is looking for great things the coming season from his trotting stallion, Catalon, full brother of Owaissa, 2:01¾. He has been worked the past couple of years with the full object of making speed and remaining sound in the preparation, and last Summer turned Readville handily in 2:15 for Trainer James O'Donnell.

Eddie Rice is reported to have made arrangements with Andy McDowell to campaign his noted pacer, The Friend, 2:05¾, which "Long Shot" Cox has declared is the only real pacer he ever sat behind out of the long list he has raced, and had he not got hurt at Poughkeepsie last year would have gone into Winter quarters with a record right to two minutes.

Frank Work's veteran trotter Edward, 2:19, is dead. He was thirty-six years old, and was famous in his day through having been the team mate of Dick Swiveller.

William Bradley will make a strong bid in getting the world's trotting team record this year with Sweet Marie, 2:02, and George G., 2:05¼. It now stands at 2:07¾ by Equity and The Monk.

J. B. Chandler is the latest said to be in line in having the champion Trampfast (2), 2:12¼, which, if true, means that the roan stallion will after all be pointed for the season's futurities.

Lord McDonald is going after the classic M. and M. stake with Al Winters, which last year worked in 2:08.

Edward Madden, the twelve-year-old son of John Madden, will be in the saddle on the horse his father elects to do the honors for America in the English Derby. He only weighs 92 pounds.

An offer of $25,000 has been refused for Sterling McKinney, 2:06¼, that stepped five miles last Fall [illegible] 2:06½ and 2:01¾.

Four teams are now alone, tied at the top of the list, in the six-day amateur team roller race at the Park Square rink, and this quartette is hanging on to their lead like grim death.

A single slip and the best of them are likely to lose their standing. That's what happened to the Braintree pair, composed of Hennessy and O'Connell, and the couple was as much feared as any team in the group.

Hennessy is a star skater and was figured as probable winner, but his partner was unable to sustain the terrible pace, and last night was continually topping, and as a result his team was put a lap in the rear of the top ones.

The Braintree pair do not think that they are out of it and expect to make a try to get back on even terms, and be in the fight for the final prizes.

There are three teams a lap behind the four leaders and they will combine between themselves to get back their lost standing. The Matthews-Oran pair lost a lap by forming a new team and they are sticking close to the advance guard ready to slip in and regain their displacement.

There will be a wild scramble to-night when the teams behind endeavor to get up and have an even chance to count in the final rush, which comes to-morrow night.

MURPHY WILL RACE STABLE

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, Feb. 28.—Richard F. Murphy, one of the leading hotelmen of this city, has made all arrangements in having a small but select racing stable out the coming season, taking in the meetings on the two-lapped tracks in New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

King Direct, 2:05¾, is expected to be a strong factor in the free-for-alls, as he is known as being partial to the short turns on a half-mile track and has plenty of speed. Argenbo, 2:10¾, will do in her class, while the slow events will be attended to by a brother of Reproachless, 2:01¾. A. S. Rodney is the trainer and driver of the string.

JIM BRIGGS FIGHTS TO A DRAW

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 28.—Jimmy Briggs of Chelsea and Dick Nelson of New York fought fifteen rounds to a draw at the Standard A. C. The bout was fast all the way. Nelson was taller than Briggs, but Briggs slammed away at his midriff to good effect in the first rounds. Briggs hit low several times in the tenth and had to be warned by the referee.

Nelson managed to avoid Briggs's attempt for a knockout in clever fashion. Nelson hit often, but his blows were weak. Briggs received most of his blows in the face, while Nelson got his in the ribs. Both men were fresh at the finish and could have gone several rounds more.

Bat Cameron of Attleboro, Mass., beat Young Britt of this city in half a round in the first preliminary. Tommy Farey of Attleboro put away Joe Ingraham of Cranston in two rounds, and Peter Fifield of East Providence and Kid Pearl of Buffalo boxed a four-round draw.

BIKE SPRINT KINGS TO MEET

Major Taylor hopes to make good against Joe Fogler in their match sprint race at the Park Square Coliseum to-morrow night, when the pair meet in three heats at a half mile, mile and third heat selected by toss.

Ever since he lost to Iver Lawson by a hair he has been looking for a victim, as he is confident that he has regained the speed which made him the champion of all a few years ago and besides to make an invasion of Europe this Summer he will have to beat the best in this country.

Fogler has beaten Lawson in a pursuit race at which he is unbeatable, but it will be a different proposition against Taylor with his wonderful jump. There were some big wagers made on the Major when he lost to Lawson and the same people will go broke on the colored flyer, believing that he is still invincible.

ROLLER POLO RESULTS.

At Waterbury—Waterbury 7, Bridgeport 3.
At Providence—New Britain 7, Providence 1.

FRANKLIN

Half comfort is no comfort in motoring

Notice how the backward tilt of Franklin springs makes them receive a road-shock at right angles with the long axis of the spring; this effectively distributes and absorbs the jar. The dotted line shows direction of the shock from the rock in the road through the hub to the spring. Franklin "spring-ability" is one of the things that make Franklin comfort complete.

Every road-shock vibrates through a steel-frame half-spring motor-car. That is the nature of steel. That is the mechanics of a half-elliptic spring. You can't get away from it. No matter how much you try to soften the jar with "shock-absorbers" and cushions, it reaches the passengers and prevents full comfort on rough roads. Even on smooth ones the jarring tires you out on a long ride.

The Franklin non-jarring wood-frame—stronger than steel, and suspended on four full elliptic springs hung at just the angle to distribute the jar most effectively—is the only construction that properly absorbs road-shocks and gives you real motoring comfort.

CANADA AND FOREIGN COUNTRIES DOUBLE REGULAR RATES.

HOTEL GUIDE WILL AID AUTO TOURISTS THIS YEAR

By J. C. KERRISON.

An unusual value, as a work of reference for tourists, will be imparted to the route book of the 1908 A. A. A. Tour and Glidden trophy contest, by the decision to print in it a list of the rates guaranteed for this year by hotels and garages in various States. The getting of these rates, under a guarantee that they will not be raised, is one of the most important pieces of preliminary work done by the A. A. A. touring board in connection with the annual tour. It originated with Chairman F. B. Hower last Summer and this year the idea will be carried out by him more thoroughly than before, as it was found to play a very important part in contributing to the comfort and satisfaction of tourists. Printed forms have been prepared, which hotel keepers fill in, giving their prices for a room for one person or two persons, with and without a bathroom, and American plan hotels quote the price of these accommodations with supper and breakfast. Garages are required to quote their rates for storage over night, with and without washing and polishing.

In all cases the hotel or garage proprietor must explicitly guarantee the rates quoted to all members of the A. A. A. during 1908. From this it can be seen how the official route book will be something to be preserved instead of being thrown away after the tour.

The several States from which these guaranteed rates are now being filed are New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Other States will be covered later.

* * *

The various automobile laws throughout the United States, no matter how widely they differ, unite in one mandatory particular. This is that a tail lamp shall light up the license number and show a red danger signal. The rigidity with which this particular feature of the law is carried out depends very largely on the attitude of the local authorities to autoists.

Nine times out of ten the victim of arrest for the violation of this tail lamp feature of automobile law is innocent of wrong-doing, inasmuch as it is usually found that the tail lamp was either blown out by the exhaust or the strong draught that rises behind the car when in motion.

A new tail lamp, known as the Telltale, is being marketed by the use of which the motorist immediately knows if for any reason the light goes out. This tail lamp is electric, and the outfit consists of a four-volt storage battery, an electric lamp, a governor, and the telltale bell or buzzer. Once connected up, the telltale bell or buzzer rings if the wire running to the tail lamp breaks or gets damaged, the electric bulb extinguishes, breaks or shakes loose, the filament burns out or the battery runs down and makes a dim light.

The action of the outfit is entirely automatic. It is so simple that it is absolutely impossible to get out of order, and should any accident happen to it, the signal is bound to warn the motorist.

The battery furnished with the outfit has four volts and forty ampere hours. The filament of the lamp is made of a newly discovered metal which reduces the consumption of current to a minimum.

SOLDIER ATHLETES IN BIG GYMKHANA GAMES TONIGHT

Soldier athletes will shine on the indoor athletic field at Mechanics building tonight, when the military gymkhana games will take place and the competition is open to all the military organizations in the State.

That there are many athletes in the militia is attested by the enormous entry list, which includes many former stars on the cinder path, and there will be some hot races between the regulars and the volunteers.

The same track and apparatus used at the B. A. A. games has been generously loaned to the soldiers.

There are many novel events on the programme not generally seen at track meets, which will add to the interest of the tournament and give the public an opportunity to witness the soldier manoeuvres, such as scaling walls and rescuing disabled men, which will put the webfeet on their mettle.

While team races between rival organizations will keep the crowd on edge, the competition in the other athletic events should be of the highest order. These athletic events include a forty-yard dash, the entry list for which will necessitate a large number of preliminary heats; a 440-yard dash, mile run, high jump and shotput. The rest of the programme is taken up with various gymkhana stunts.

Governor Guild was to have been present to award the prizes, but owing to the fact that he is to go to Buffalo tonight, he has delegated Adjutant-General Brigham to officiate in his stead. The members of the Governor's staff will be present in uniform.

Among the entries is that of B. L. Young, the former Harvard quarter-miler, who is to run in the 440 and who is entered from the First Squadron Cavalry. A. B. Mason, the former Harvard hurdler, and W. M. Rand, one of the best hurdlers now in college, will hitch up together in an attempt to lower the world's three-legged record for forty-five yards, held at present by H. L. Hillman and Lawson Robertson.

George Billings will be welcomed on the floor as referee. He always has been active for the welfare of amateur sports here in Boston, and his great fairness, untrammelled by technical narrowness, makes him just the man to handle these games.

WILLIE HOPPE OUT TO WIN WORLD'S BILLIARD TITLES

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—The confidence of Willie Hoppe, the boy wonder at the cue, is best shown in the great task he is about to take up, that of attempting to win the world's championship at both the 18.1 and 18.2 styles of balkline, and, in addition to this, will defend the reputation of professional billiardists against the kingpin of the amateurs, Calvin Demarest. He is out to corner all the world's billiard titles that are now being played for. Hoppe will make this attempt next month.

The match with Demarest will be the first of Hoppe's undertakings. It will begin on the evening of March 2. The match will be a 2,400 point affair and will be played in blocks of 400, extending six nights. Hoppe will be forced to go at his fastest clip, as he is to labor under a handicap, playing the 18.1 game against Demarest's 14.2.

The latter style is the one employed in amateur championship tournaments and, besides benefiting Hoppe and giving him a good workout for the first of his championship engagements, it will also be a help to Demarest in fitting him for the next race for the amateur title, which is scheduled to take place at the N. Y. A. C. later in March.

The first of Hoppe's really important matches is slated to be played in Chicago on the evening of March 11. In this affair, Jake Schaefer, the present holder of the 18.1 title, will defend his honors against the young marvel. The match will be a 500-point contest and, besides the title, will net the winner a $1,000 purse and the diamond emblem.

The match between Sutton and Hoppe is scheduled to take place at Madison Square Garden, New York, March 27. This will also be at 500 points, for a $1,000 stake and the world's championship at this style. Sutton appears to be practically unbeatable at the 18.2 game, but Hoppe's friends unite in predicting that Willie will take his measure and are willing to back their favorite against the big champion.

Hoppe is confident of his ability to take the measure of both Sutton and Schaefer and also win from Demarest.

Should Hoppe come out of his two big contests with colors flying, he will have accomplished something which few billiardists would attempt. He has shown brilliancy in his recent practice work and exhibition contests and may surprise even his most ardent admirers when the time arrives.

WORKING MAN NOT GENTLEMAN SAY ENGLISH

Any person "who is or has been by trade or employment for wages a mechanic, artisan or laborer, or engaged in any menial duty, or who has ever been employed in or about boats or in manual labor for money or wages," is barred from rowing on a crew in the regatta next Summer at the Olympic games in England, even if he is an American.

That is in substance the announcement issued by Julian W. Curtiss, who, with James Pilkington, formed the special committee on rowing of the American Olympic Committee. It was included in a lengthy statement regarding the conditions under which the Olympic rowing races will be contested.

The inclusion of these qualifications, although in a great measure expected, will come as a sort of shock to many American oarsmen since the official announcement. It shows that the American committee has bowed to the will of the Britons in this matter, for the English believe that only "gentlemen" should compete in athletics. If by any chance the American committee should choose as a member of the Olympic crew a man who at some time or other during his life had to ply a trade for a living he can be promptly protested by the Englishmen.

The statement further sets forth that the regatta will be held at Henley-on-Thames on July 28 and the following days over a course about a mile and a half in length. The events will be races for eights, fours and pairs and sculling races. Only two entries are allowed from each country. Entries must be made by June 1.

It is further stipulated that entries must be accompanied by a declaration in writing by the secretary or a responsible official of the rowing association, or the committee of the country from which a crew is entered, to the effect that the amateur rules of the English Amateur Rowing Association have been strictly complied with.

MONEY TO LOAN.

Half Per Cent a Month

Is all the interest we charge—absolutely the lowest rate charged on Furniture or Piano Loans by any money lender anywhere. If you must borrow money, your American common sense will bring you here. When you get money from us $10 costs 5c. a month; $25 costs 12½c. a month; $50 costs 25c. a month. A $50 accommodation, repaid $1 a week, will cost you $1.50 for the year, absolutely nothing more for anything, if you keep your agreement. If you don't keep it, the cost will be more—but even then, far, far less, than if you borrow money from the high price money-lenders, and it cannot, under any circumstances, cost you any more than if you borrow elsewhere at legal rates. We loan on Furniture or Pianos. We charge only half per cent a month interest. All others charge two to forty times as much interest or discount. We charge nothing for "expense." All others charge $2, $3, $5 or $10 for "expense." Your private offices, insuring privacy. Our customers make all payments at a bank—saving embarrassment of going to a Loan Office weekly. We serve more customers and serve worthy borrowers far better, than any other money lender in Massachusetts. May we serve you? Hours: 8.30 A.M. to 6.30 P.M. Wed. and Sat. till Nine P.M. Goats Do Not Dig Up Roots

But They Can Destroy Bushes with Their Nibbling

Copyright, 1908, by American Journal Examiner

This quotation is printed at the top of a column in the Milwaukee Social Democratic Herald:

> "There are a thousand hacking at the branches of evil to one who is striking at the root."—Thoreau.

It's a very good quotation. And it's especially timely now, when everybody has a different remedy for existing evils without apparently disturbing the roots of those evils to any extent.

Don't, however, accept any striking statement as final UNTIL YOU HAVE THOUGHT IT OVER YOURSELF.

It is true that few strike at the root of an evil, while many strike at the branches. That doesn't mean that striking at branches is useless. We can all see the branches—they spread around—and if we don't like them we hit and hack at them.

The roots are buried from sight. It is quite likely that birds sitting on branches of trees haven't the most remote suspicion that any roots exist. And many of us human beings, held back, kept from the sunlight by the thick branches of evil, know little about the roots, often do not know that they exist at all.

But even if we do NOT understand the root of evil, it is a very good thing TO STRIKE AT ITS BRANCHES.

Goats cannot dig up stumps by the roots. But out in Oregon they use goats to clear up land. The land is covered with brush, with thick stumps sprouting. The goats go in and they strike only at the branches. They nibble off the leaves and the twigs. They keep nibbling. THEY STOP THE GROWTH OF THOSE LEAVES AND TWIGS ABSOLUTELY. And thus they kill the roots, out of sight in the ground below. And when the root has been killed by constant attacks on the branches above the earth, the root rots, becomes part of the ground and ceases to obstruct the work of the plow and the harrow—and you have your fertile field.

The better plan, if you have enough power and energy, is to grub up your roots, clear the ground at once, and get to work with your plow and your seed the following season, not waiting for the slow process of nibbling goats and decaying roots.

But, if you can't strike at the root, if you don't even know where the root is, or what it is, don't fail to hack at the branches anyhow. Destroy them whenever you see them. And in the long run, if you keep at it persistently and give the branches no time to grow, you'll kill those branches, and the roots hidden below will die for lack of the nourishment that comes through the branches.

For instance, the column from which we clipped Thoreau's striking paragraph contains this energetic item:

> "Ugh! We notice in a report from Washington that in one year twenty thousand cattle, twelve thousand sheep, four thousand calves and ninety-one thousand hogs, besides an amount of parts of such animals amounting in bulk to probably as much again in meat, is now discarded and condemned in the United States for some forty-five different diseases, including tuberculosis, cholera, Texas fever, erysipelas, cancer, gangrene, trichinae, etc. And we used to eat all this!"

It is dreadful to think that human beings, thanks to competition, commercial indifference or heartless cupidity, have been eating the bodies of diseased animals.

But it is cheering to know that, THANKS TO THE HACKING AT THE BRANCHES OF EVIL, human beings in this country have been saved to the extent of 20,000 cattle, 12,000 sheep, 4,000 calves and 91,000 hogs diseased.

The impure meat agitation was "hacking at the branches" exclusively. Nobody went to the root of the evil, or of any other commercial evil.

About questions of political economy men are really as ignorant and uncertain as birds about the roots of trees. Men do not agree as to the roots of our economic troubles. One man will point to the beef packer and solemnly tell you, "Money is the root of all evil, including that evil."

Another will tell you, "Private ownership is the root of the evil. ALL the people ought to own EVERYTHING, and then they would protect themselves, as they would have only themselves to think about."

Another will tell you, "What is EVERYBODY'S business and EVERYBODY'S property is NOBODY'S business and NOBODY'S property. And you have dishonesty and meanness because you have great organizations in which no individual is responsible, and even if the PEOPLE instead of a corporation were owners, you would still have lack of responsibility and lack of quality."

We don't know about the roots of our economic troubles; at least we don't agree about them. But we do know about the branches, for we SEE those branches.

We say that there is vice in human nature. What the root of it is we do not know, unless it be that original sin of the apple amazingly multiplied in its criminal nature.

What is the root of the gambling instinct in men? We do not know. But the branches are the betting rings of the race track, the poolrooms and gambling hells. HACK THEM DOWN, and that root will die and rot.

Where you see evil growing strike at the branches, not spasmodically, but steadily and persistently, and the evil will disappear, roots and all.

Occasionally some great individual or some great movement of all the people goes to work FUNDAMENTALLY and digs up evil roots on a big scale—a painful, difficult process.

We did that in the Civil War when we dug up the root of Slavery.

We did it in the Revolutionary War when we gave this country freedom and capacity of growth by digging up the root of Foreign Tyranny. They had been striking at its branches in Boston when the Tea Party was active, hacking at the branches in the South when men like Patrick Henry and others fired the people and created the nation. Finally they dug up the root, which happened to be named George III.

Other kinds of tyranny, the tyranny of organized capital, the tyranny of trusts, of a bench not always representative of the people, have sprung up. Perhaps we shall some day identify the roots of these new tyrannies, perhaps we shall have the energy to dig them up once and for all and cast them out.

Meanwhile, let us keep hacking at the branches, knowing that every branch cut off and trampled down means A PAIN IN THE ROOT OF THE EVIL. And let us not lose heart in a sometimes discouraging fight.

> "To admit that because things have long gone wrong it is impossible to make them go right is a most fatal doctrine."—Ruskin.

On the B. & A.

By James J. Montague

"WHERE are you going, my pretty maid?"
She eyed me with haughty disdain.
"I'm going to Wellesley, sir!" she said,
And she boarded a B. & A. train.

AH! The things that we think we are going to do
And the things that we thoughtlessly say.
My Lady Disdain when she got on that train
And started for Wellesley that day
Believed she was telling the veriest truth.
But these things chanced to befall:
When the train started out a hot-box was struck,
Stopped an hour, pulled up for a broken-down truck,
Spent three hours with that, then six hours more stuck
On a tangled-up rail, and oh! tale of hard luck!
She never reached Wellesley at all.

"WHERE are you going, my pretty maid?"
Although she was loath to confess,
"I'm going to Worcester, sir!" she said,
And she boarded a Springfield express.

OH! The foolish ideas we oft entertain
That we really have something to do
With the fates that abide in our midst and decide
As to where we are traveling to.
The maiden had never a thought to deceive,
No truthfuller maid could be met.
But at Newton the train was a fortnight delayed;
At Natick a wearisome twelvemonth it stayed;
At Framingham spent just about a decade.
And so I'm afraid that the beauteous maid
Has never reached Worcester as yet.

WEX JONES—EDITOR.

VOL. I WASHINGTON, FRIDAY, FEB. 28, 1908. NO 6

EDITORIAL

IT is highly gratifying to the Gazette to find that its editor's fleet is receiving such a warm welcome in Peru. The following telegram has been received from President Pardo:

"Roosevelt, etc., White House Gazette, Washington:—

"Your fleet does you credit.

"PARDO."

To which the following reply has been sent:

"Pardo, Peru:—

"I am pleased you like my fleet. My people will be pleased also.

"ROOSEVELT."

My officers and men have pleased me by their successful voyage toward my western shores.

In future, when a toast is drunk to the President, every person present must rise and shout:

Roosevelt!
Roosevelt!
Rah! Rah! Rah!
Hughes! Taft!
Fairbanks!
Ha! Ha!! Ha!!!

To fill the chair—
TAFT!
Roosevelt is for Taft—so are Roosevelt's people.

HUGHES NOT CHILLY

Regular Hot Tamale Beneath the Lace, Says Friend

"I and Hughes have known each other for years," says Ermine Jay Ridgepole in his Doodlebody's Magazine. "At Yarvard I used to call him 'Mr. Hughes.' As a lawyer, I called him 'Hughes.' When he became Governor I called him 'Guv,' and now that he's a Presidential impossibility I call him 'Whiskers.'

"Hughes doesn't know a funny story from a bale of hay, but he can hardly read Doodlebody's for laughing.

"An artist would admire the Guv's hands—they are white, as if washed regularly, and muscular from constant exercise in signing appointments to P. S. Commissions.

"In a crowd the Guv isn't so noticeable, but your attention would be attracted to him instantly if you met him in a barber shop.

"Who thinks of Fairbanks as anything but a human icicle—ignoring entirely his rescue of a damp waitress and his famous cherry, second only to George Wahsington's? Why, then, should the public conclude that Hughes is chilly? Why, the Guv's a red hot tamale beneath his frosty exterior.

"I and Hughes have known each other for years. That's why I write this boost for the dear old Guv.

"And don't miss the next number of Doodlebody's; it's a yell from start to finish."

SUBMARINES TESTED

Pond Boat Shows Merit in Grueling Trial

Members of the House Committee on Deep Sea Soundings were taken out last Friday in the Pond submarine Shrimpcatcher.

The submarine sank very successfully in ten fathoms, and the members of the committee were much interested in watching the crabs, lobsters, oysters and other fish through the windows of the little craft.

"How long can you remain on the bottom?" the captain was asked.

"A hundred years or longer," proudly replied the captain.

"My, my!" and other exclamations of delighted wonder burst from the throats of the committee.

At a late hour to-night the Shrimpcatcher was still on the bottom and unable to rise.
